By Joseph Driscoll.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 18.—Prime Minister Chamberlain today evaded attempts in the House of Commons to make him state whether Britain would fight on the side of Czechoslovakia in event of war resulting from the failure of the current negotiations between the Prague Republic and its minority population of Sudeten Germans.

Question Fired at Him.

Under a barrage of questions from Laborites, Liberals, and from his own Conservative Party, Chamberlain stuck to his deliberate policy of keeping the world guessing as to what this country might do if the Germans and Czechs should stop negotiating and start fighting.

First, one of his own Tory supporters, Sir Arnold Wilson, asked the Prime Minister to give assurance Britain would not support denial of a plebiscite in the event of failure of negotiations between Sudeten representatives and the Czechoslovakian government.

Chamberlain turned this aside by saying conversations were still proceeding with the authorities concerned, and he would prefer at present to hope for a successful outcome to those negotiations rather than anticipate their failure.

Queried on Support.

Tackling the prime minister from an opposite angle, a Labor spokesman, Dr. Hugh Dalton, posed this question, "In the event of the Czechoslovakian government making reasonable and generous proposals for the settlement of matters now under consideration, can we be assured that the government will support Czechoslovakia in resisting unreasonable and excessive demands designed to break up the Czechoslovak state?"

The prime minister again refused to be committed, and replied vaguely:

Popular World War Figure Succumbs After Year's Illness.

By the Associated Press.

The Queen, one of the best-known members of royalty among Americans after her ovation-filled trip to the United States in 1926, had suffered from an unusual form of cirrhosis of the liver for almost a year.

Her doctors said only about 50 such cases were known to medical science.

Although wasted and worn by her long illness, Queen Marie was reported to have retained much of the beauty for which she was world-famed. She would have been 63 in October.

Queen Marie knew a week ago in a sanatorium in Dresden, Germany, death was near. She insisted on being taken back to her beloved Sinaia Palace home.

A former court marshal of the Queen was reported to have been dispatched from Bucharest to Dresden posthaste in a vain effort to dissuade her from making the dangerous rail journey.

En route she suffered the first of a series of hemorrhages which led to her death. She arrived Satur-

Patent Evils First Line of Trust Attack

Legal Abuses Stressed; All 'Hill' Members Out of Town.

By Robert C. Albright.

A comprehensive investigation of patents—their suppression through so-called "company graveyards" and their use to foster monopolies—will usher in the main work of the joint legislative-executive monopoly inquiry, it was learned last night.

Existing data on patents is being assembled and analyzed. In two or three weeks, subject to approval of a special sub-committee, subpenas will be issued for patent information in the first all-inclusive study of the subject undertaken by the Government.

Three of the six executive agencies represented on the Joint Monopoly Committee are expected to be represented in the patent inquiry—the Justice Department, the Federal Trade Commission and the Commerce Department.

Arnold in Charge.

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold will direct this phase of the investigation, assisted by Chairman Garland Ferguson and Ewin L. Davis, of the Federal Trade Commission, and Assistant Secretary of Commerce Patterson, it is understood.

Legal use of the existing patent laws to build up monopoly in an industry or a product, extension of control through patent "improvements," price control through patents, the inventor as a "hired man" in great research organizations; purchase and suppression of patents and methods of "patent pooling," would all be explored in the study.

Details of conducting the inquiry have not yet been fully worked out. One proposal being considered for simplifying the study is to take a typical home and trace the life story in industry of the various items that go into its construction and equipment.

"Hill" Six Absent.

The patent investigation was suggested in President Roosevelt's monopoly message to Congress and committee members now are generally in agreement that it should be one of the first subjects dealt with.

Mr. Roosevelt specifically recommended "amendment of the patent laws to prevent their use to suppress inventions and to create industrial monopolies," but it was learned that the investigation will not be directed toward a specific remedy, but toward so-called evils and abuses legally possible under the present patent law set-up.

With all of the six Congressional members of the joint committee out of town, each of the executive groups is busy assembling and coordinating information in its own field pertinent to the general monopoly study and the exact role of each unit has not yet been finally worked out.

SEC First in Action.

First off to a start was the Securities and Exchange commission, which last week began a study of private placements of entire blocks of corporate securities with insurance companies and later will go generally into the field of investment banking.

Full conferences of the committee have been discontinued temporarily. Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman of the joint committee, left Washington on a brief Western tour yesterday, and Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, last member of the Congressional group in town, was to leave on vacation late last night.

Jones Warns Banks to Ease Credit Locally

RFC Chief Says Federal Lending Will Continue Unless Replaced.

By William V. Nessly.

Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC, in a frank letter to officers and directors "of every bank in the United States," last night issued a new warning that unless banks participate more actively in supplying credit for American business, the Government will be forced to continue lending.

The occasion was his transmittal to all State and national banks of the new regulations covering investment securities, recently issued by the Comptroller of the Currency, and the uniform banking examination procedure adopted by the comptroller, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Reserve Board, and representatives of certain State bank supervising authorities. He urged the bankers to take advantage of these simplifications and clarifications to cooperate in meeting the demand for business and industrial loans.

As an alternative he reminded them that "there still is persistent talk about the establishment of industrial banks throughout the country, to be at least partially owned by the Government, to provide capital for local private business," and recalled the numerous bills introduced in Congress to provide further extension of Government credit to business in one form or another.

He cited the growth of finance companies' activities and their high

Actress to Scatter Mate's Ashes in 'Thickest Crowds'

New York, July 18 (AP).—Peggy Wood, the actress, came home today from London to give the late John Van Alstyn Weaver, her writer husband, the last service he had asked.

In a poem of pity—"When I'm All Through"—Weaver had asked his people not to "go stickin' me in no stuffy cemetery lot."

Instead, he wanted his ashes scattered, on a sunny hilltop, on water and a part of them on the sidewalk, "where there's the thickest crowds, right in the city."

Police said she has accompanied the bandit for about three weeks but denies any part in the burglaries. She is being held at the House of Detention.

Mayo Aide Calls A.M.A. 'Incapable'

Mayo Doctor Belittles Abell's Assurance on 'Painstaking Study.'

By Gerald G. Gross

Climaxed by a fierce clash over policies of the American Medical Association, the National Health Conference opened yesterday and immediately took under consideration a new $850,000,000-a-year public health program indorsed by President Roosevelt.

The more than 300 medical, labor, farm, social work and civic leaders present came to the Hotel Mayflower convention expecting fireworks and they got them in the addresses of Dr. Olin West, secretary and general manager of the American Medical Association, and Dr. Hugh Cabot, consulting surgeon at the Mayo Clinic and a member of the A. M. A. since 1899.

Charging that the medical profession is "quite incapable of keeping up its own standards," Dr. Cabot inferentially indorsed an aggressive governmental program for provision of adequate health care to all. This is what is known as "State medicine" to the profession.

Dr. Abell Chided.

Chiding Dr. Irvin Abell, president of the A. M. A. and who proceeded him on the platform, the Mayo Clinic surgeon took exception with his statement that "the medical schools of this country are today superior to any in the world." He also belittled Dr. Abell's assurance that the A. M. A. is now conducting a "painstaking study" of medical needs in this country.

"I do not myself feel much confidence in the result (of the study) because it is not clear by precisely what method physicians are to know about the people whom they never see," Dr. Cabot said. "The people who get no medical care obviously don't crowd the doctors' offices and precisely how they are to arrive at figures which will be more convincing, if perchance we need any figures that are more convincing, is beyond the limits of my slow mind."

Cites British Trials.

The veteran surgeon, who made it clear at the outset that he was no spokesman for Mayo Clinic, said it is obvious that Government is going to take a bigger hand in seeing that the Nation's sick receive care. By providing the necessary funds, it will automatically assume responsibility for maintenance and improvements of standards, he said.

Responsibility for medical care, education and research is now shouldered by the American Medical Association, and its shift to Government — whether Federal, State or local—would mean the advent of the thing which the A. M. A. heads came to the conference to fight—State medicine.

Dr. Cabot spoke of the "relative success" of health insurance in

Roosevelt Fishing Success Topped By Military Aide

Aboard U. S. S. Houston, en Route to Panama, July 18 (AP).—President Roosevelt tried out his luck as the Nation's first fisherman today and was rewarded with a 38-pound yellowtail.

Honors for the day's biggest catch, however, went to Col. E. M. Watson, who landed a 60-pound grouper and a large California white sea bass.

Sunny weather and a calm sea greeted President Roosevelt on the third day of his leisurely vacation cruise after a transcontinental tour during which he spoke in behalf of several New Deal candidates.

3 More Deaths Lift Palestine Toll to 129

The deaths brought to 129 the number of victims of the disorders since July 5. They included 76 Arabs, 35 Jews and 18 roving tribesmen.

King George's Doctor Backs Operation on Assaulted Girl

By the Associated Press.

London, July 18.—Baron Horder, physician to King George VI, headed tonight a brilliant array of medical talent backing Dr. Aleck William Bourne, one of London's foremost obstetricians, in his Old Bailey trial for keeping a 15-year-old assault victim from motherhood.

Testifying in a test case through which medical circles hoped to bring more liberal legislation, Horder defended on humanitarian grounds the operation performed by Dr. Bourne.

Admitting it was unusual for him to express an opinion without examining the patient, the famous physician said, "As far as I can judge . . . the facts would have led me to the same conclusion as Mr. Bourne."

Dr. Bourne, accused of performing an illegal operation on the young girl, victim of assault by soldiers, deliberately sought to be prosecuted in an effort to liberalize the medical laws.

Dr. Bourne disclosed in his own testimony he had performed a similar operation in 1935 on another 15-year-old girl and the house surgeon refused to assist him. He said he decided on the next occasion he would get a court ruling.

Attorney General Sir Donald Somervell said that if the operation was necessary to save the life of the girl he would not regard it as an offense under the law.

Dr. Bourne admitted this was not the case.

Baldonnel Airport, Dublin, Ireland, July 18.—Douglas G. Corrigan, 31-year-old Californian, eased a battered $900 airplane onto the airport here today after flying 3,150 unauthorized miles alone across the Atlantic from New York.

He climbed from the cockpit of his nine-year-old craft into a circle of Irishmen. As they gazed open-mouthed, he patted his ship and said:

"All it needs is a bit of grease. Then it will take me back to New York."

$15 and a Grin.

"It took me 28 hours and 13 minutes.

"Where am I? I intended to fly to California."

He didn't have a passport, landing papers or maps. He didn't have a radio or any fancy instruments.

But he had $15, an incorrigible grin and his story of a flight in the wrong direction.

Long Run, Wrong Way.

It was the most sensational "wrong way run" since the dash of another Californian, Roy Riegels, University of California football player, 60 yards in the wrong direction in the January 1, 1929, Rose Bowl game with Georgia Tech.

Corrigan landed at 2:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m., E. S. T.). He had left Floyd Bennett Field at 4:17 a. m., E. S. T., Sunday "for California."

While technically detained here, it was not expected he would encounter much trouble for his unsanctioned flight over the Atlantic.

(In Washington, Dennis P. Mulligan, chief of the Air Commerce Bureau, said he had postponed the question of punishment. Regulations provide for penalties ranging from a fine to revocation of a pilot's licence for a foreign flight without permit.)

Onlookers Whistle.

Airport officials took a look at the American's single-engined plane and shuddered. Hundreds of persons flocked to the airport to see the flier and his craft.

Corrigan glibly explained how he had made a bee line out over the Atlantic when his destination

The Man Corrigan

'Gone Again' Is a Devil-May-Care Irishman With Brains and Experience Who Violates Rules and Gets Away With It.

They call him "Gone Again Corrigan." That's because he has a habit of dropping in—and out—of the Nation's airports with surprising suddenness.

Douglas Corrigan is a man who violates the rules—and gets away with it. On the surface a devil-may-care Irishman, he actually has the brains and the experience that make for success.

Slim, with a mop of reddish-brown hair and an Irish grin, Corrigan became an aviation enthusiast under the indirect influence of Charles A. Lindbergh. He helped assemble the "Lone Eagle's" ship when he was employed at the Ryan Airplane Co.'s factory in St. Louis.

Corrigan has a history of transportation behind him. His father, Clyde Corrigan, a railroad engineer, died under the wheels of a switch engine in New York City 15 years ago. His mother died a few months later from grief.

The latest transatlantic hero, who has a brother and a sister, attended grammar school and high school in Los Angeles. He has been living with his uncle, the Rev. S. Fraser Lanford, pastor of the First Baptist Church, at Santa Monica, Calif.

It was from the Rev. Mr. Lanford that Corrigan learned first principles of navigation. The minister had once been an ardent yachtsman and taught his nephew something of the knowledge he had accumulated.

Those who have known Corrigan "when" say he is a bit of a wild man and has a habit of chuckling when he says something he enjoys. No ballyhoo artist, he is known to be as secretive about his plans as was his hero, Lindbergh.

Associates of Corrigan's at the Long Beach, Calif., airport said yesterday they had christened his flimsy, antiquated flying crate "The Corrigan Clipper."

"Why, it took Doug 13 days to fly the ship from New York, after he bought it in 1935 for $310.

Connor said Corrigan put his ship in shape while still working as a welder for the Ryan Co. In recent months, Connor said, Corrigan had been saving money for his flight by economizing on food.

"He would eat half a pecan roll and drink a half bottle of milk for breakfast," the mechanic said, "and then finish off the rest for supper."

To test his book knowledge, Corrigan flew six times across the country, studying principles of navigation. He gained additional air experience as a barnstormer.

In his barnstorming days, it was Corrigan's custom to roar over a town flying upside down. For a while, until the Department of Commerce frowned upon the practice, he took up passengers for spec-

Lonergan Wins Cummings' Aid For Senate by New Deal Talk

Senator Lonergan (Democrat), of Connecticut, a conservative who opposed the Presidents' court and reorganization plans, last night was freed, apparently, of any threat of an Administration "purge" attempt

Attorney General Homer Cummings, himself a resident of Connecticut, issued a written statement saying that a radio address made a few minutes earlier by the Senator "would seem to remove all reasonable objections to his nomination." Lonergan had declared in his talk that "I am and have been for and with President Roosevelt."

Democratic National Committeeman David E. Fitzgerald was quoted by the Associated Press as saying at New Haven that Lonergan's declared position "should vouchsafe for him the Democratic nomination as United States Senator, and guarantee his election in November."

Lonergan added, in his speech:

"There have been differences, of course, between me and those with whom I have been associated. It is human that men differ and I have followed my conscience and the light that I possess. It is with the greater objectives and noble aims of this period that I am concerned, and little differences cannot muddy the waters."

He continued that in his Congressional service he had often been called upon to vote "upon measures concerning the social welfare and the economic betterment of the

Ousted Morgan Says Dissension Appeared in '33

Testifies at Investigation Disagreement Arose Over Policies.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 18.—Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, ousted as chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, charged today differences within the TVA appeared less than a month after the vast agency was created in 1933.

He testified before a Congressional investigation committee that disagreement arose from the first over matters of policy, declaring TVA Directors Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal opposed many of his suggestions.

Harcourt A. Morgan, now chairman, testified President Roosevelt was guided by the "hand of providence" when he selected the Tennessee valley for the Federal Government's experiment in social and economic planning.

Chairman Morgan outlined the TVA program which he said sought to cure a "cancerous growth which must affect adversely the entire national well-being," not once did he refer to Dr. Morgan whose defiance of President Roosevelt's authority led to his dismissal and precipitated the inquiry.

Differed on Program.

Dr. Morgan said he felt immediate action was necessary in the TVA program, in line with President Roosevelt's emergency relief program, but that his associates held back in favor of a "long-range program."

The three of them were "far apart in philosophy," he said, adding that he had never made any attempt to "grab power" for himself in those early days.

He said it was he who suggested the appointment of a general manager and that he recommended Albert L. Scott, head of Lockwood Green Engineering firm of New York. Scott declined the offer.

"That, I think, is a good indication I was not trying to grab power," he asserted.

Dr. Morgan denied he tried to plan the development of all power sites in the Tennessee Valley as charged by Harcourt Morgan, and denied his policies were "alarming, visionary and highly impractical" as his former associates had said.

Dr. Morgan went on record as objecting to appointment of Thomas A. Panter, of Los Angeles, as the the committee's chief engineer. A letter from him protested Panter's appointment on grounds Panter might be subject "to an influence" unfriendly to the former TVA chairman.

The letter said that Panter's superior in the Los Angeles Bureau of Power and Light, Ezra Frederick Scattergood, had attacked Dr. Morgan's policies.

Advocated Two Functions.

At one of the early board meetings, Dr. Morgan said, Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan suggested the TVA "had just two functions—fertilizer and power, and that the TVA had no business in any other activities."

He described as among his first suggestions (1) immediate building of Norris Dam, and erection of transmission line from Muscle Shoals to the dam site; (2) adoption of a fertilizer program; (3) research in power transmission and (4) formation of a real estate board to control speculation in the valley area.

These suggestions, Dr. Morgan asserted, were those which Harcourt Morgan referred to as "alarming, impractical and highly visionary."

Chairman Morgan said the TVA objectives were (1) conservation and water control on the Tennessee River; (2) conservation and water control on the land; (3) disposition of electric power; (4) national defense, and (5) regional studies.

TVA is concerned, he said, with whether the fundamentals of "the water, the land, the energy in the water, and the fertility in that land" shall "become cumulatively an enemy of human life" or whether they shall be conserved and used "so the people may build their lives upon them."

people" and that "not in a single solitary instance have I betrayed an inherent and compelling interest in those problems."

Of the speech Cummings said:

"No friend of the President can possibly take exception to it. The Senator places himself squarely behind the policies of the Administration and earnestly asserts his loyalty to the objectives of the President."

With apparent reference to Lonergan's opposition to some New Deal proposals, Cummings said, "There is ample room for differences of opinion as to details and methods. The important thing is to make certain that we are all going in the same direction and that we all accept the same leadership."

In addition to fighting the court and reorganization plans, Lonergan had sought outright repeal of the President's favored tax on undivided profits and made one of his rare speeches against the tax.

The Administration's course with regard to his candidacy long has been in doubt. Only one candidate has announced formally in opposition to him in the primary, Archibald McNeil, former national committeeman.

However, Dr. Edward C. Dolan, registrar of the Treasury, recently announced that he was available as a "100 per cent" New Deal candidate against Lonergan, and Representative Koppleman has been antagonistic to the Senator's campaign and has been mentioned as a possible Senatorial candidate.

City Officials Are Warned of Central Trend

Institute of Law Officers Told of Growing U. S. Power Over D. C.

Better municipal government, together with an increased public confidence in city officials, must be brought about "that we may reverse the decidedly dangerous trend toward the centralization of too much governmental power in Washington," the Institute of Municipal Law Officers was told last night.

The speaker was himself a Federal official—O. R. McGuire, counsel of the General Accounting Office.

Addressing the institute's banquet at the Hotel Mayflower, he harked back to a warning more than two decades ago by Elihu Root that if local governments failed in the performance of their duties, the people would demand and receive such performance from Washington.

"And who is there to say that he was not a true prophet, but with a voice crying in the wilderness?" said the speaker.

Would Begin on Police.

A good place to begin improving municipal administration is with the uniformed policeman, McGuire declared, explaining that discourtesy or biased enforcement of the law on a policeman's part is a step todard corruption.

Barnet Hodes, corporation counsel of Chicago and president of the institute, not only expressed the belief that Federal "meddling" in local government has not reached the danger stage but added, "I do not believe that we will reach that stage."

Addressing the symposium on government corporations held earlier in the day at George Washington University, Hodes said the danger lies rather in straitjacketing of cities by their State governments.

Assails Old Theory.

"We must change or at least effectively cushion the leading principle of municipal corporations," he said, "the principle that cities are merely creatures of the State and may function only as the State specifically permits."

If this does not occur, he warned, such large cities as New York, Chicago and Philadelphia may "secede" and apply for separate statehood.

Backs War on Disease.

The institute president strongly indorsed the present Nation-wide drive against syphilis and gonorrhea and stated that compulsory examination and treatment is the most effective weapon.

"If States may be persuaded to enter into compacts by which they will enforce together effective laws for compulsory examination and treatment for social diseases, I think real progress may be made in this vital problem," he said. "I believe our municipalities ought to take the initiative for bringing pressure upon our States for such action."

Encouraging results in Milwaukee in the use of chemical tests on autoists charged with drunken driving were reported by Walter J. Mattison, city attorney. Since last May 28, when the city ordinance was passed, there have been 62 arrests for that offense, he said. Fifty-five defendants submitted to the test and 45 of them were convicted, he said.

Sit-down Remedy.

Mattison said sit-down strikes have disappeared in Milwaukee as the result of a new State law which makes the municipality liable for damage.

Citing "less and less immunity of State and municipal interests to Federal taxation," John N. Sebrell, chairman of the taxation committee, suggested local taxation of Federal buildings as "equitable reciprocity."

The city sales tax was criticized by A. Shapiro, assistant city solicitor of Philadelphia, who said that adoption of that form of revenue there has hurt business, former customers leaving town to make purchases and escape the tax.

Murray Seasongood, former mayor of Cincinnati and chairman of the municipal law section, said that "there must be vital changes in the law relating to municipal corporations so that they may approximate the duties they ought to perform for the body politic."

Senate's Agents Investigating Political Spending in 3 States

Campaign Fund Committee Sends Investigators to Kentucky and Pennsylvania to Study Charges; Tennessee Inquiry Already Started.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Senate Campaign Funds Committee, announced committee investigators were being sent to Kentucky and Pennsylvania last night to look into charges of political abuses.

Another investigator already is at work in Tennessee. Sheppard refrained from disclosing the agents' identities.

The committee made public campaign contributions and expenditures reported by a score of senatorial candidates in replies to a committee questionnaire.

Sheppard said none of these candidates had filed complaints that money appropriated by Congress had been used to intimidate or coerce voters.

Gillette Spent $1,720.

The reports showed Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, had received contributions of $1,056 and spent $1,720 up to mid-July in his re-election campaign. He won the Democratic nomination over Representative Otha D. Wearin, who was supported by WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins.

Two additional Iowa candidates were among those who answered the questionnaire. Joseph J. Meyers, of Carroll, reported contributions of $859 and expenditures of $1,585, and George F. Buresh, of Cedar Rapids, said he had received no donations and paid out only $2.09. Both were defeated.

Former Senator Thomas Heflin, Alabama Democrat, who failed in a comeback attempt in the primaries against Senator Hill, said he had received contributions of $150 and spent $5,295.

Wilson Lists $50.

Another unsuccessful primary cost Mayor Davis Wilson of Philadelphia, $50. He said he received no contributions.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, who is out for the Senate seat formerly occupied by the late Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, reported no contributions or expenditures.

Others who sent in statements to the committee reported contributions and expenditures, respectively, as follows: Forest S. Van Valin, Williamsport, Pa., none; Charles A. Jones, Lincolnton, N. C., none; Ray E. White, Clayton, Mo., $100 and $100; Willis H. Meredith, Popular Bulff, Mo., none and $170; Oliver Starr, Gary, Ind., none and $1,362; Halvor L. Halvorson, Minot, N. Dak., $25 and $383; Chan Gurney, Yankton, S. Dak., $2,025 and $3,036; William C. McRae, Atlanta, Ga., $150 and $611; Harry O. Glasser, Enid, Okla., none and $500; Wilfred M. Leise, Tulsa, Okla., none and 10 cents; P. C. Nelson, Enid, Okla., none; George McGill, Wichita, Kans., none and $100; Ector R. Johnson, Little Rock, Ark., none and $1,725; Thomas E. Swanson, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., $382 and $829.

trol of a patent now possible under the law. Aimed specifically at patent suppression, the King measure would permit licensing of others to use a patent after it had been suppressed for five years.

Before leaving, King was in conference with both Arnold and Commissioner Davis on the patent phase of the investigation. Both the Utah Senator and Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who is ill, were assigned by O'Mahoney to work jointly with the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission in their contribution to the general study.

It was stressed yesterday that no punitive or prosecuting action was contemplated. Most so-called abuses aimed at in the patent inquiry are strictly within the law.

But committeemen expect to show how 17-year control of certain patents enables some industries to get such a start on competitors as to make it virtually impossible for independents to catch up, and how this control can be extended by periodic patent improvements.

Most of the patents now being issued are said not to be basic. They are rather in the field of patented "gadgets" that permit legal extension of control that often is tantamount to monopoly—and sometimes has price control implications, it is said.

On the suppression side, it was pointed out that companies geared to produce a given commodity often prefer to purchase inventions involving an improved product and to shelve them rather than upset their existing production machinery or alow them to go to a competitor. They go, instead to what is known in patent parlance as the "company graveyard." Proposals are expected to be advanced that such patents be lapsed, or licenses be granted to others unless they are utilized.

The committee also may study merits of suits and threatened suits for patent violations for possible evidence of intent on the part of large entrenched groups to tie up patents by litigation and thus combat competition by newcomers in an industry.

Early antitrust cases involving patents may be combed over for light on the problem. Monopoly implications of patents are said to be as old as the first antitrust laws, passed 40 years ago.

One of the early antitrust cases involved a company that 60 years ago bought up more than 80 patents for spring-tooth harrows and was enabled thereby to control the output and price of harrows.

Another frequently cited is the so-called "bathtub case" of 30 years ago, in which an association, by patenting an enamel spraying process, was able to control prices in the whole bath-fixture industry.

One company that had a patent on a mimeograph machine was able to dictate the type of stencils and other supplies to be used with the machine, while another that had a motion picture machine patent determined the films that could be used in it, until finally stopped in the courts.

Rail Wage Cut Parley Stymied After 3 Hours

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 18.—Deadlocked after three hours today, a joint conference committee of Class 1 railroads and the Brotherhood of Railway trainmen, was to consider again tomorrow the proposed 15 per cent wage-cut for rail workers.

H. A. Enochs, committee chairman, said: "We presented no alternative to the 15 per cent cut proposal. We're talking 15 per cent."

A. F. Whitney, president of the brotherhood, said: "We're not offering a compromise plan. Nothing has occurred to suggest that wages should be reduced."

The meeting between the committee and the trainmen will be followed by negotiations in behalf of the 16 unions of nonoperating railroad employes, set for Wednesday.

Whitney and other spokesmen for the 900,000 workers represented in the conferences have said they would resist any efforts to slash wages.

Whitney contended the roads had "cut man power 200,000 since last September," and added, "employes are entitled to a living wage, even if the carriers are unable to pay a penny of interest on their bonded indebtedness or dividends."

Railroad officials say the proposed cut would reduce annual operating expenses by $20,000,000, which is necessary because of a steady drop in earnings and increased operating costs and fixed charges.

Relief Outlay 35 Cts. of Each $1 of Revenue

Emergency Expenditure in Last Fiscal Year Is $2,000,000,000.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Confidential reports prepared by Administration fiscal experts disclosed last night that the New Deal spent $2,001,240,000 in emergency relief activities in the 1938 fiscal year, or 35 cents out of each dollar collected in taxes. Tax collections totaled $5,658,385,125.

The reports were compiled by Bureau of Internal Revenue and Treasury experts and are for the guidance of Administration officials in the spend-lend program and in determining fiscal policies.

The bulk of the emergency spending was by the Works Progress Administration which distributed $1,478,858,499 in State and Federal work programs, student aid and National Youth Administration activities.

Other emergency activities included:

Rural electrification, $4,370,840; public works, $74,180,000; Navy, $13,600,000; highway construction, $79,692,000; Farms Security Administration, $169,297,000; reclamation and related projects, $57,206,000; rivers and harbors projects, $22,857,000, and Army, $25,562,000.

The reports revealed that New York led all others with $1,234,365,717.88 in tax payments and topped the list with $250,154,874 in receipts from the Federal emergency relief program. There were wide variations in the positions of other States between the amounts of taxes paid and Federal funds received.

Ryan Alimony Ruling Assails Rich Playboys

Judge Awards Girl Wife $833 a Month With Separation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 18.—A defense of American womanhood, "no matter how humble her station in life," as "not to be treated as a chattel and afterward dropped like a toy by a drunken playboy" came today from Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo, using the case of Mrs. Martha Barkley Ryan, 22, as an object lesson.

The court awarded Mrs. Ryan, of Morganton, N. C., a separation, $833.33 monthly permanent alimony and $7,500 in lawyers' fees, from her husband, Basil A. (Pat) Ryan, who asserted after their marriage he had no recollection of it, and was "trapped into it" while he was drunk.

Chides "Pampered Youth."

"Although the amount of alimony I am awarding may seem out of proportion for a girl who occupied the station in life the plaintiff did before her marriage," said Justice Cotillo, "nevertheless, I believe my awards are fair and just."

He took a slap at "pampered youth," saying Ryan evidently was a perfect example of such pampering, and at "poor little rich girls whose only ambition in life is to try to dissipate fortunes created by their forefathers," and earned "through the sweat of honest toil of American people." The justice said Ryan was "indeed the counterpart" of these girls.

"The only difference in the present case," Justice Cotillo continued, "is that the recipient of any financial bonanza * * * will be an American citizen rather than a broken-down, impoverished foreign so-called nobility."

Ryan, 29, married Miss Barkley, unwed mother of another man's child, last November 4 three days after he met her in Hickory, N. C. She took the baby along on her bridal night. The marriage crashed a day later.

His bride sought $15,000 a year alimony, $15,000 for lawyers' fees, and a separation on the ground of desertion. "The few days I knew Pat were just like a merry-go-round," she said.

In the meantime, however, she filed nonsupport charges against Ned Parks, 24, a Washington, D. C., soda fountain worker, charging he was the child's father. The case was settled out of court.

Steel Head Incited Violence, Strikers Tell Senate Inquiry

belief that White, in combatting an American Federation of Labor strike at the Berger Manufacturing Co. plant in 1935, had deliberately tried to provoke trouble between his armed guards and the unarmed picket line.

In opening hearings on the labor history of the Republic Steel Corporation, headed by Tom Girdler, Chairman Robert M. La Follette heard testimony that the employe representation—or company union—plan of the corporation had cost the firm more than $677,000 during its four years' operation.

The plan, hailed by White as "effective" and as "bringing about harmony between the workers and the company," cost $392,120 for the employe representation system; $214,129 for strike-fighting, and $11,000 for the purchase of tear gas and other strike munitions.

Says He Got the "Boot."

After Hamilton, a Canton bus operator at the time, two other bus drivers, a steel worker and a union chief all had testified that White, by a "bull-dozing" and "threatening" attitude, had attempted to incite a riot, White took the stand to deny the story.

White began with a long preamble about communism and "political strikes for power." He said his activities had been devoted to persuading workers to return to their jobs. He said:

"If the workers had won the strike, it would have meant the elimination of the Berger Manufacturing Co. They knew that we had just gotten the contract to supply steel for the National Archives Building here in Washington.

"I was getting the boot from all sides for trying to keep the Berger plant open, when it was always a source of trouble and cost. So it meant plenty to me."

Clarence William Hale, employed at another plant, said he had been slugged by White's "gorillas" while on a visit to the strike scene "for educational purposes, so I'd know how to handle things in a strike."

Assault Is Charged.

Hale said: "When I asked White some questions he said: 'Do you work here?' I said: 'No, thank God, I've been blackballed here for years!' He said that was a sign of communistic tendencies. I saw I was about three feet inside of the company property, so I turned around to get off. White shoved me in the back when my back was turned and hit me in the back of the neck with the other hand. I said: 'You gorilla, keep your hands off me.' Then as I started at him, one of his thugs, Arthur Farwick, hit me with a blackjack.

"As White came at me Hamilton here socked him and knocked him down. Three thugs drug me into the time-keeper's office and pinned me against the wall.

"While they held me, Farwick came in shouting, 'There he is, the dirty — — —,' and tried to hit me while they held me. But I kicked worward with my feet and hit a pretty vital spot and when they let go I made my way out of there quick."

White Denies Story.

White denied this story. "I was not out there to create a riot," he said.

"This so-called gentleman here," he went on, looking at Hale, who half rose in his seat, "who says I struck him, was constantly interrupting me when I told the men to go back to work—that we'd protect them.

"This gentleman here," he said, again glancing at Hamilton's fists, "struck me in the back of the neck when I wanted to get this noisy little chap off our property. When I went inside Hale was sitting in a chair. I saw no policemen maimed by him. I told them to let him go and Hale rose and grabbed my hand in thanks and said: 'By God, Mr. White, if they were all like you there would never be any trouble anywhere!'"

At this version of their testimony, the workers looked dourly at White. Hamilton gave such an impression of wanting to "peel" White again that LeFollette hastened White through the rest of his story and adjourned the hearing till tomorrow.

Union Leader Replies.

Before the conclusion, however, Hale asked La Follette if he could repudiate White's assertion and said simply:

"He called me this 'so-called gentleman.' Well, I'm a good citizen. I have two children and I've held my job for a number of years. I'm chairman of the grievance committee of the American Federation of Labor union in my plant, and my work is satisfactory to the management. I only know that I'm gentleman enough not to try to create riots."

In examining the background of labor troubles in "Little Steel," the big independent firms outside of the United States Steel Co.'s dominant position, La Follette began the first day's work with an exploration of the general background of the firm's labor relations, spending much time in getting White's philosophy of management spread on the record. At one point this occasioned a tremendous roar of laughter. The incident arose when White, defending the troops of armed police under district captains who patrol Republic property, said:

"Why, we have to protect things. Now, this audience here looks like pretty good people. Yet I've seen no less than four policemen, armed with revolvers, stationed around the room."

Home-like Atmosphere.

La Follette said dryly:

"We want you to feel that you're in a home-like atmosphere, Mr. White."

As the audience, partisan to the labor viewpoint, roared and clapped, White waved to La Follette in the manner in which a tennis player congratulates his opponent on a service ace, and La Follette sternly hammered for order.

Republic Steel, for more than 20 years on one side of a contract with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, terminated that relatoinship in 1934, when they stiffened their labor relations policies noticeably.

By 1936 the Amalgamated became the nucleus of the steel workers' drive initiated by John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Tom Girdler, president of Republic, in a speech before the Iron and Steel Institute at that time, made the remark that he hoped no steel official would negotiate with the unions, "because that would make it so much harder for the rest of us," and added his now famous line:

First Lady, Son Non-Committal on 3d-Term Prospect

Newark, N. J., July 18 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and her son, James, were all smiles but almost noncommittal when asked today whether President Roosevelt would seek a third term.

"I'm out of politics, I just got out of a hospital," said James, on alighting from a plane at 5:05 p. m. (E. S. T.) which brought him from Rochester, Minn., where he had undergone treatment since June 21 for a small gastric ulcer.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she would go to Hyde Park, where she would remain during the summer. James planned to spend the night there and go tomorrow to Rye Beach, N. H., where his family is visiting, and then proceed to Maine. He said he would return to the clinic about September 1.

Jail Guards Scared By Firecrackers

Florence, Ariz., July 18 (AP).—Convicts sleeping in the State Penitentiary yard caused momentary fears of trouble early today by discharging firecrackers beneath walls patrolled on their first night by National Guardsmen.

Maj. Leroy Weyrick, commanding the detachment of 55 troopers, said the explosions caused apprehension before the source was discovered. He said he was told some prisoners had firecrackers on the Fourth of July and those discharged were a few remaining in their possession.

Washington State Forest Fires Laid To Incendiarists

Seattle, July 18 (AP).—Trails of incendiarists were sought tonight in forests of western Washington, center of Pacific Northwest fires that have blackened thousands of acres of timber.

Forest Supervisor T. S. Goodyear said incendiarism "unquestionably" figured in the 25,000-acre Ryderwood-Mount Abernetly fire.

Goodyear said efforts of 450 men and six heavy tractors were expected to halt the Ryderwood-Mount Abernety blaze.

Fires in the Snoqualmie Pass area and the Cascade River region were under control.

Steamship company officials blamed forest fire smoke and fog for a collision of the liner Mount McKinley with the tanker Agwiworld off Port Angeles, Wash. The Mount McKinley, carrying 153 passengers, reported minor damages.

Auto Strikes Pole; One Man Killed, 3 Companions Hurt

A colored man was killed and three companions injured early yesterday when the automobile they were riding in struck an electric light pole in the 2800 block of Rhode Island avenue northeast.

The man, Howard Dent, 41, 1206 Fairmont street northwest, was the forty-fifth traffic fatality this year.

He was riding in the rumble seat of his own machine, which was operated, according to police, by Robert O. Chambers, colored, 36, 1741 T street northwest, who suffered lacerations on his face and a broken jaw. Chambers was held at Gallinger Hospital pending an inquest.

Two women riding in the automobile were treated at Freedmen's Hospital for fractures and cuts. Minnie Middleton, 23, 305 K street northwest, received cuts to her legs, broken teeth an', multiple fractures of the lower jaw. Lucille Small, 30, 1503 T street northwest, sustained a fractured jaw, cuts and possible internal injuries.

D.C. Board Claims Man Held 1 Post, Drew Jobless Pay

Philip W. Mickens, colored, 30, of 1200 block Harvard street northwest, a recreational director for the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs, will be tried next Tuesday on a charge by the Unemployment Compensation Board that he drew $7 weekly for seven weeks on the representation that he had no job. Police Court yesterday set bond at $300.

It was charged that in the meantime, he was working at the colored boys club and drawing $78.50 from PWA for the job.

Navy Wants to Sell Nine 'Eagle Boats'

Constructed during the World War to hunt submarines, the vessels are 200 feet long and have a displacement of 430 tons. At the armistice 60 had been completed. Eight are still in service as training craft for reservists and naval militia, and nine are decommissioned.

Bids for the vessels will be opened at the Navy Department August 18. They will be sold on an "as is, where is and if is" basis, without guarantee.

2 Navy Fliers Die In Crash on Coast

Everett, Wash., July 18 (AP).—Two Navy fliers died today when a scouting seaplane from the U. S. S. Louisville in an attempted forced landing plunged into the Snohomish River after hitting power wires. They were Aviation Cadet Joseph Carter Booth, Glendale, Calif., and J. J. Monti, pharmacists' mate.

Mrs. Bloch Sponsor.

Secretary Swanson yesterday designated Mrs. Claude C. Bloch, wife of Admiral Bloch, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, as sponsor for the submarine, Swordfish, scheduled to be launched at the Navy Yard, Mare Island, Calif., on November 8. Mrs. Bloch is now living at the Villa Rivera, Long Beach, Calif.

Japan Fliers DareLandingto Fire Foe Planes

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), July 19.—Japanese bombers spread death and destruction through the middle Yangtze area today as they sought to blast out the stubborn Chinese defenses which have bogged down the Japanese advance on Hankow by land and river.

Japanese aerial forces launched a terrific attack on the open city of Kiukiang, killing hundreds of civilians, according to semiofficial Chinese reports.

Twenty-seven Japanese war planes dropped more than 150 bombs today in one of the biggest raids of the war on the Wuhan district cities of Wuchang, Hanyang and Hankow. Attacks were directed against Chinese airfields in the tri-city area.

Japanese also topped their weekend air raiding by a daring early morning raid on Nanchang Airdrome, where Japanese fliers vaulted from their planes, sprinted to the airdrome, where five Chinese planes were stored, ripped off wing fabric and set fire to the planes with matches.

Japanese naval communiques described the raid as "the most daring attack in the annals of the war."

Defenders Surprised.

The communique said Chinese defenders of the airdrome were so "taken aback by their opponents' recklessness" they offered only desultory machine-gun fire in defense.

The Japanese squadron destroyed 20 Chinese planes and lost only one of their own number—Lieut. Mochifumi Natgo, veteran air "ace," crashing after colliding in mid-air with a flaming Chinese plane during a dog-fight over the airdrome before the Japanese planes landed.

Eight Chinese planes were shot down in this spectacular aerial battle between the Japanese squadron and 15 Chinese "fighters."

After driving off the Chinese and bombing seven Chinese planes on the airfield, a Japanese flier named Ono suddenly swooped toward the field. Japanese said other fliers at first thought Ono was hit, but when he made "a graceful three-point landing" they realized his intention and followed.

On Ground 30 Minutes.

The planes were on the ground 30 minutes, covering their men with machine-gun fire while the latter set the remaining Chinese planes afire. The planes departed, after searching the airdrome and taking two machine-guns, in a hail of machine-gun fire from the Chinese, which proved "totally ineffective," according to the communique.

The Japanese military spokesman said planes earlier had bombed Chinese positions between Kiukiang and the "Lion Hill" forts, below Kiukiang on the Yangtse, inflicting heavy damage. Chinese reports said Kiukiang itself had been heavily bombed on Sunday, the planes flying low over the city and strafing the streets with machine-gun fire.

Legless Man, Family Evicted; Can't Get Relief—and It Rains!

Orville Davis, 42; Mary Davis, 12, and Mrs. Winifred Davis, holding her 2-year-old daughter, Geraldine, as they were found surrounded by household furnishings that were moved out on the sidewalk yesterday.

Orville Davis' wrath is about equally divided between the weather man and the powers that distribute relief funds.

If it hadn't been for the relief people, he says, he wouldn't have been evicted yesterday from his home at 638 Newton place northwest for nonpayment of rent. But he blames the weather man for deluging his furniture and bedding, removed from the house by a U. S. deputy marshal and stacked on the lawn.

Davis, who is 42, has not worked regularly since 1923 when he lost his leg in an accident. He is trying to support his wife and two children, Mary 12, and Geraldine, 2, on the $2 he makes every week as a Sunday watchman on construction jobs. (Carfare and social security taxes reduce his wages to $1.78.)

Since moving from their home in Abingdon, Va., four years ago, Mrs. Davis has worked off and on as a hotel maid. The Davises went on relief last winter, but in April, when Mrs. Davis secured another job, they voluntarily cut themselves off from public assistance.

Then Mrs. Davis lost her job, her husband explained yesterday. They tried to return to the relief rolls, but were refused because of shortage of funds. "All we wanted was enough to pay the rent," Davis said. "We've always been able to provide our own food."

Gradually their back rent mounted up. In June Mrs. Davis wrote President Roosevelt. A secretary referred the letter to WPA, with no results. Unemployment compensation is not forthcoming because Mrs. Davis has not been able to secure from former employers a complete record of her jobs.

Saturday she visited the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars. (Her husband served overseas during the World War.) She also visited the Red Cross and numerous churches. Still no result.

Yesterday, with the rent bill up to $27.50, the deputy marshal and his men arrived. Today, if Davis sticks to his word, he and his family will still be lounging on the bedroom furniture "stored" on the lawn of their former home.

"Here I stay until the relief people do something for us," he said defiantly. "We'll spend the night in the police station if we have to." (A sympathetic officer from the Tenth Precinct assured him they'd be welcome.)

"My wife's eyes are bad, and the case worker says we could get relief if she had a doctor's certificate saying she couldn't work," according to Davis. "But she can work, so why shouldn't she? The way this relief business goes, you can get money if both your legs are chopped off, your back broken and your head's knocked off. But what good is it to you then?"

The Davis' only hope now is that someone will advance them $45 to rent another house. They think they could manage things that way. Otherwise they'll just live on the lawn and hope for dry weather.

Fliers Will Pay Hull Respects for Cutting 'Red Tape' on World Hop.

Berlin, July 18.—As a result of a mass move by German Jewish emigrants for United States visas, the American consul general in Berlin no longer accepts applications.

The decision was put into force Friday when the consular staff was working at its full capacity on 10,000 dossiers, referring to 15,000 people.

The names of the would-be emigrants are listed by the consulate, and the date of their registration will be valid as such when they finally are allowed to submit their applications, which may not be for six months.

The American annual immigrant quota for the greater Reich is 27,000. Over 60,000 applications are already in the hands of the United States consul in Germany. According to past experience, about 35,000 will be found valid; thus for the year 1938-1939 there are already 8,000 who, with their families, may not be admitted as immigrants to America.

The 27,000 is allotted to the four American consulates in Germany, as follows: Stuttgart, 11,000; Vienna, 6,000 and 3,000 each for Berlin and Hamburg. The last 4,000 is composed of allotments to the American consulates all over the world.

U. S. Body Asks 8½ Billions for Health Service

Fund to Be Expended at 850 Million Annually for Ten Years.

The $8,500,000,000 national health program proposed by the President's Technical Committee on Medical Care—$850,000,000 year for at least ten years—had even the most billion-dollar-minded New Dealers a bit groggy yesterday.

Dr. Hugh Cabot, Mayo Clinic surgeon, said the committee of physicians will take up the gigantic project at a meeting Thursday.

The physicians' group, better known as the "Committee of 430" since its "declaration of independence" last year from conservative policies of the American Medical Association, is expected to indorse, at least in principle, the big spending program.

Conclusions Listed.

A unit of the Interdepartmental Committee to Co-ordinate Health and Welfare Activities, which President Roosevelt created in 1935 following passage of the social security act, the technical committee concluded:

1. Preventive health services for the Nation as a whole are grossly inefficient.

2. Hospital facilities are inadequate in many communities, especially in rural areas, and financial support is both insufficient and precarious.

3. One-third of the population of the United States is receiving inadequate or no medical service.

4. An even larger fraction of the population suffers from economic burdens created by illness.

To eliminate these deficiencies, the committee recommended adoption of an $850,000,000-a-year program—half to be paid for by the Federal overnment and half by the State and local governments—to expand public health and maternal and child health services, add 360,000 hospital beds and care for the "medically indigent."

Asks Disability Incomes.

In addition to this outlay, the committee recommended initiation of a "general program" to fill whatever gaps might be left and the adoption of temporary disability insurance to assure wage earners continuity of income through periods of disability, whether due to illness or injuries.

No estimates of cost were submitted in connection with these admittedly less urgently needed projects.

The committee, of which Assistant Chief Martha M. Eliot, of the Children's Bureau, is chairman, estimated $200,000,000 should be spent annually to combat tuberculosis, veneral diseases, malaria, pneumonia, cancer and other leading causes of death and illness, also including mental and industrial hygiene activities.

For maternity care and the care of newborn infants, the annual sum of $95,000,000 was recommended. Another $60,000,000 would be spent on medical care of children and $10,000,000 for crippled children's services.

Finding hospital accommodations and hospital organizations throughout the country are "ill adapted to the varying needs of people living under different circumstances," the committee urged the addition of 360,000 beds in general, tuberculosis and mental hospitals and the erection of 500 health and diagnostic centers in areas inaccessible to hospitals.

Cost $146,050,000 Estimated.

The annual cost of such a program, averaged over a 10-year period and including special three-year grants for maintenance of new institutions, was estimated at $146,050,000.

"The committee is impressed with the evidence now available that one-third of the population which is in the lower income levels is receiving inadequate general medical services," the report said.

In submitting the report, the committee said:

"The Technical Committee on Medical Care is firm in its conviction that, as progress is made toward the control of various diseases and conditions, as facilities and services commensurate with the high standards of American medical practice are made more generally available, the coming decade, and and national health program, will see a major reduction in needless loss of life and suffering—an increasing prospect for longer years of productive, self-supporting life in our population."

All five members of the committee are Federal officials. They are Drs. Clifford E. Waller, George S. J. S. Falk, Social Security Board; J. Parrott and Joseph W. Mountin, of the Public Health Service, and Dr. Eliot.

Meantime, the "Committee of 430" placed in the mails yesterday an announcement it plans to campaign aggressively for less costly medical care. Its original membership is now more than doubled, with 840 doctors throughout the country in the "rebel" organization.

Great Britain, to the discomfiture of conservative doctors in the audience, and cited the importance of providing paid government administrators to pass upon the quality of medical services.

Dr. West, in an impassioned reply to the Rochester, Minn., surgeon, attacked him for holding up the American medical profession to ridicule "while the audience enjoyed it." (Dr. Cabot's remarks were frequently punctuated by applause and he received an ovation when he finished.)

Recalls Activities.

"I don't know if the profession is any more proud of him than he is of it," said Dr. West, who at no time named the object of his criticism.

The A. M. A. secretary-manager emphasized the association's unceasing activities in the public interest and the unselfishness of its individual members in ministering to the sick.

"In the last few years there has been a flood of criticism, even villification, of the medical profession," he asserted.

"There are incompetents in this profession, just as there are in all, but the association is doing all it can to keep them out. If the A. M. A. had its say so on who shall and who shall not practice, the number would be very few."

Organized nearly 100 years ago, the association has never digressed from its principles of serving and protecting the public, Dr. West asserted.

"He lost his temper," said Dr. Cabot in commenting afterward on Dr. West's rebuttal. "If the association goes after me for what I said today they'll find I'm a prickly fellow to handle."

The platform exchange between the two doctors was the highlight of an opening program which included talks by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor; Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran, of the United States Public Health Service; Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, and Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the President's committee sponsoring the conference.

Calling the three-day meeting to order, Miss Roche read a message from President Roosevelt in which he expressed the "hope that your technical committee's report on the need for a national health program and its tentative proposals will be read and studied not only by the participants in the conference but by every citizen."

Cites Remarkable Strides.

(This report, with its White House approved recommendation of an $850,000,000 public health program, is described in a separate story.)

"Nothing is more important to a nation than the health of its people," the President said. "Medical science has made remarkable strides, and in co-operation with Government and voluntary agencies it has made substantial progress in the control of various diseases.

"But, when we see what we know how to do yet have not done, it is clear there is need for a co-ordinated national program of action. Such a program necessarily must take account of the fact that millions of citizens lack the individual means to pay for adequate medical care. The economic loss due to sickness is a very serious matter, not only for many families with and without incomes but for the nation as a whole.

"We cannot do all at once, everything that we should do. But we can advance more surely if we have before us a comprehensive, long-range program, providing for the most efficient co-operation of Federal, State and local governments, voluntary agencies, professional groups, mediums of public information and individual citizens.

"I hope that at the National Health Conference a chart for continuing concerted action will begin to take form."

Miss Roche, formerly assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of the Public Health Service, reviewed the Nation's public health problems: Lack of medical attention to the poor, the high infant mortality rate, shortage of hospital beds, high mortality and morbidity rates among industrial workers and economic losses caused by illness.

"We cannot attack with small change a $10,000,000,000 problem," she said. "To carry forward a long-time program of health services and medical care commensurate with need will cost the Government millions, but save the Nation billions."

Surgeon General Parran said, "It is not unlikely public health may be the next great social issue in this country." The significance of this conference, he said, lies in the fact that "for the first time we can be optimistic that action will follow plans."

Acknowledges Differences.

Fully aware of the medical profession's suspicion of increased Government participation in health matters, Dr. Parran acknowledged differences of opinion will arise as to the part which Washington should play.

"There can be no disagreement, however," he added, "with the principle that the Federal Government must increasingly assume leadership in the study of those great causes of diseased and death, before which we are now helpless.

"It alone is in a position to bring about that co-ordination of investigative effort which seems necessary for most effective progress."

A. M. A. President Abell, first to take the platform at the afternoon session; Dr. Parran, Miss Lenroot and Miss Roche addressed the morning session—said his organization recognizes the "lag that exists between the development of medical knowledge and its application to all who may require it."

He discounted the argument lack of hospitals in rural areas is acute and reminded the assembly that food, clothing and housing, as well as medical care, must be taken into consideration in any discussion of unfulfilled needs.

Because of the variegated character of the problem, it can not be met by formulas, he said.

Green urged extension of the scope of the Public Health Service, now without authority to go into the States except by invitation; governmental intercession to increase hospital facilities and expansion of maternal and child welfare services.

Green also advocated enactment of proposed State legislation providing for compensation of workers for time lost as a result of injury or sickness.

Sponsors Health Insurance.

Mrs. H. W. Ahart, president of the Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told the conference her organization "has boldly sponsored various phases of group medicine and health insurance."

"Many of our rural communities today are in dire need of suitable medical attention and hospitalization," she said.

The demand for health insurance and adequate medical care for all classes is a force that must be recognized "despite any objections by individuals within the medical profession," she said.

Mrs. Dorothy J. Bellanca, vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, said existing health needs cannot be handled by private medical organization.

Co-operative medical societies in rural areas were urged by Ben Kilgore, chairman of the medical committee, American Farm Bureau Federation. The Federal Government should supply funds for country hospitals, he said.

Miss Dorothy C. Kahn, director of the Philadelphia County relief board, appealed for relief of impoverished persons not now obtaining medical care.

Jerry O'Connell's Fight to Highlight Montana Primary

By the United Press.

The shadow of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, field marshal of Senate forces which killed President Roosevelt's Supreme Court bill, last night hovered over Montana's Democratic primary today.

Representative Jerry J. O'Connell, 28-year-old New Dealer, has made no secret of the fact that Wheeler's seat is his ultimate political objective and he considers his re-election to the lower House an essential step in this direction. He has strong support from liberals and organized labor.

O'Connell capped his campaign last night by claiming that "President Roosevelt told me" to defeat the State organization controlled by Wheeler.

Opposing O'Connell is Payne Templeton superintendent of schools at Helena and former president of the Montana Educational Association. He has approved some New Deal reforms and condemned others.

Representative James F. O'Connor, Democrat, also is up for renomination and is being opposed by H. B. Rolphn, president of the Farmers Union.

New RFC Notes Oversubscribed Twelve Times

A twelve-fold oversubscription to the recent offering of $200,000,000 of seven-eighths per cent Series N notes of the RFC yesterday brought total allotments of $211,450,000. Total subscriptions, it was announced by Acting Treasury Secretary Roswell Magill, were $2,626,571,000, and allotments were made on an 8 per cent basis.

The cost to the Treasury of short-term borrowing rose yesterday for the third consecutive week, the Associated Press reported.

The Treasury sold $100,000,000 of 91-day Treasury bills for an average price of $99.986, making the cost 14 cents per thousand dollars. This compared with 10 cents last week and 3 cents three weeks ago.

Yesterday's rate was equivalent to borrowing money at 0.54 per cent.

59 PWA Projects Receive Approval

By the Associated Press.

The Public Works Administration announced yesterday Presidential approval of 59 non-Federal PWA projects and said it would contribute $3,924,300 toward their construction.

Forty-five of the projects were for school buildings and other educational facilities. Administrator Harold L. Ickes estimated total construction cost at $8,720,641.

The largest single allocation was $466,363 to Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.

Officials Laud Corrigan, Warn Of Emulation

The trans-Atlantic flight of Douglas P. (Gone Again) Corrigan has put the Bureau of Air Commerce out on a shaky limb.

Astonished officials, secretly overjoyed at his success, were concerned yesterday over what method they can adopt to prevent every barnstorming flier from taking off for points east without notice, without punishing Corrigan himself too severely as an example.

Expressing fervent hope that Corrigan would not try to fly back to the United States, they warned other aviators not to attempt to emulate him.

"The fraternity of airmen rejoices in his good fortune in flaunting the dangers of the North Atlantic which has taken its toll of good men," Denis Mulligan, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, said over the red network of the National Broadcasting Co. yesterday afternoon.

Warns on Return Flight:

"The Bureau of Air Commerce," he added, "acclaims his courage, but in the same breath admonishes him to be content with his newly won laurels and not attempt a return flight to America; for the westbound passage, because of prevailing winds, is even more hazardous than the eastbound flight.

"Because he has succeeded so well, we must admire his courage—in the judgment of many, plain foolhardiness—but we earnestly hope that there will not follow in his wake the usual host of aspirants who will want to ride to glory by the same route which has been the history of spectacular flights during the past 10 years. We cannot encourage haphazard adventures in aviation for it is a serious business, and it has been established that accidents in any form of flying are damaging to our basic policy, which is to make the airplane a safe medium of travel and transportation."

Whether he flies back or not, Corrigan will have to return his plane to this country quickly, or be liable for prosecution under the National Munitions Act which requires that a permit be obtained from the National Munitions Control Board of the State Department before any airplane, military or civil, can be exported.

Passport No Difficulty.

Secretary Hull told his press conference he was interested to learn of the occurrence, while other officials at the State Department said no action to prevent Corrigan from flying back is in contemplation—yet.

They added that Corrigan's departure without a passport is not actionable and that he could be granted one even while abroad.

Last night, nonplussed, Bureau of Air Commerce officials were reaching for straws. The air regulatory agency and its personnel are flabbergasted.

Mulligan's first joyful reaction caused him to exclaim: "It's a great day for the Irish."

Apparently wanting to forgive and forget, but unable to bring himself to say so, he said something instead about "considering the case." His subordinates remarked sagely that the matter is "under advisement."

Jones Prods Banks On Business Loans

Loans

Finance companies, Jones said, "have proven that installment credit, efficiently handled, can be sold very profitably, while the security they require, as well as their maturities, are well within good banking practice.

Cites Possible Profit.

"Banks could render this service at much lower interest rates to the borrower, and at a good profit to themselves. They would be lending deposits on which they pay little or no interest, while the finance companies borrow most of the money they lend."

Figures on 25 finance companies were offered by the RFC head, showing loans of $4,380,000,000 in 1937 on invested capital of $391,000,000 and borrowings of $1,224,000,000, with net profits of $85,785,000, or about 17 per cent on the capital invested. Contrasted with these totals were figures for six of the country's largest banks, with capital funds of $1,000,000,000 and deposits of $8,500,000,000, which reported $63,000,000 profit, or 6 1-3 per cent on the invested capital.

"Banks lend to these finance companies at absurdly low interest rates," Jones continued, "instead of going after the business directly." Then he reminded the bankers that "when the businessman lets his competitor get ahead of him, the bank is quick to notice and take it into account in considering his credit rating."

Suggests Flexible Terms.

Many business loans which do not enjoy top credit rating may be safely and profitably made by adding a small interest to cover the extra risk, he continued.

"Being willing to lend on terms unsuited to the borrower's needs, or offering lines of credit that cannot be used, does little good," his letter cautioned. "Prudent business will restrict its operations rather than rely on lines that require too many renewals."

4 U.S. Firms to Bid On Brazilian Order

Rio De Janeiro, July 18 (AP).—Four United States companies, it was ascertained today, will make a joint bid at the end of the month to supply Brazilian railways with locomotives and cars valued at $6,000,000.

The companies are the Baldwin Locomotive Co., the American Locomotive Co., the American Car & Foundry Co. and Pullman Standard Car Co.

The project proposes purchase of 26 locomotives and 1,000 cars.

'Gone Again' is a Devil-May-Care Irishman With Brains and Long Years of Experience

Corrigan

The plane that Corrigan pushed over the Atlantic spaces has a normal cruising range of 338 miles. The tanks which boosted its fuel capacity from a normal 35 or 40 gallons to 320 gallons were installed by Corrigan himself.

He apparently was careless of the fact that the extra tanks completely obscured his forward vision and forced him to slip the ship sideways in order to look through the side windows.

Known to West Coast airmen as a skillful pilot and an able mechanic, Corrigan never got his name in the newspapers until his nonstop flight to Roosevelt Field on the eve of Howard Hughes' departure. At that time, because of the interest centered in Hughes' flight, he won three paragraphs in some of the metropolitan newspapers.

Plane Built in 1929.

Built in 1929, Corrigan's plane is a Curtiss Robin of a model since discontinued. It is powered with a 5-cylinder, 175 horsepower Wright Whirlwind motor, which he assembled himself from the Wright motors for which he traded other possessions. According to aviation experts, the motor is less powerful but more modern than was the motor used by Lindbergh.

The plane, built of fabric stretched over a steel-tube, welded frame, has a cruising speed of between 90 and 100 miles an hour and a top speed of 118 miles an hour. It has a 41-foot wing span, is 25 feet 6 inches long and 8 feet high. Fueled to capacity, it weighs 2,523 pounds. The extra gasoline tanks that Corrigan installed would add greatly to this weight.

Curtiss officials said that the plane is identical to the one used by Al and Fred Keys when they set the world's endurance record in a flight over Meriden, Miss., in 1935. They stayed aloft for 653 hours, from June 4 to July 1.

That Corrigan is quick to benefit from the experience of others is shown from the action he took in preparing for his flight. After reading that Howard Hughes' motors had heated up during the round-the-world trip, Corrigan punched two extra holes in the cowling of his ship, near the magnetoes.

In the week that he spent in New York, Corrigan stayed at the home of a barnstorming friend, Stephen Reich. When the Irishman first arrived at the field, he asked whether there was a vacant hangar he might sleep in.

Indifferent to Danger.

So far as hangers-on around the flying field could remember, Corrigan's daily diet would bring apoplectic blushes to the face of any dietician. They said it was about like this: Breakfast, glass of water; lunch, chocolate bar with nuts; supper, two hotdogs, with mustard and a candybar for desert.

After he left Floyd Bennett Field, Kenneth Behr, the manager, said: "If he has any food with him it must be in his pockets. I didn't see any." Behr described Corrigan as a "typical young Mick," with sound mentality and an apparent indifference to danger.

Dispatches from Ireland said that Corrigan, for rations, had taken along some water and chocolate and fig bars.

Checked on Weather.

At the field it was said that Corrigan depended on no special weather information for his flight. He just looked at the weather reports in the newspapers.

At Roosevelt Field, where the young California daredevil landed, it was believed that he had been seriously intending to return to California, as he had announced, and changed his mind only when he stepped into his plane.

It was pointed out that he had to tie the plane's door shut with baling wire because the lock and handle were broken.

Born in Galveston, Corrigan showed his combined Texan and Irish independence in a deal with oil company representatives in New York. He used several brands of gasoline and oil, but refused to endorse one brand of oil in return for five gallons—free. He got them anyway.

Offers Pour In.

Whatever his fortune with industrialists before the take-off, Corrigan had plenty of backing from them once he'd landed in Ireland. William B. Leeds, tin magnate, announced he'd sent his European representative to Dublin to make sure that Corrigan was taken care of. Leeds had learned that the flier once worked in one of his factories.

At the same time, New York City's Advertising Club offered to pay Corrigan's expenses for a return trip—if he came back by boat.

Corrigan has been well known at Roosevelt Field for eight or ten years. They describe him there as "In again, out again, gone again Corrigan." And they know that what money he has he spends for his ship. He makes his money as a mechanic and as a part-time flying instructor. Corrigan is said to have 1,500 flying hours to his credit.

Ocean Permit Denied.

Denied permission by the Commerce Department to fly the ocean a year ago (another request had been denied the year before), Corrigan, when he brought his ship East last summer, couldn't land at Roosevelt field because he had no license—he has since been operating on an experimental license. So he took it to Fitzmaurice field, at Massepequa, Long Island, and afterward barnstormed through New England, going as far north as Maine.

A thorough-going sportsman, Corrigan refused to write the story of Hughes' flight for a New York newspaper.

"Nope," Corrigan said, "it's his party and I'm not going to horn in on it. Hughes is doing a really good job of flying and it means something to aviation."

Hughes himself, who flew the globe with four assistants and the finest equipment that money could buy, was astounded when he learned of the feat of the reckless Irishman in a $900 plane.

"It's very, very remarkable," he said, when he recovered from the shock and gasped for words.

Reticent, but sociable, Corrigan was a friend of Ruth Nichols, outstanding woman flyer, while he was in New York. She cabled him congratulations after he had landed in Dublin.

Corrigan, confident of his luck and ability, never wears a parachute. Miss Nichols offered to lend him one. He declined.

Dispatches from Norfolk, Va., last night, helped to reconstruct the obscure past of Douglas Corrigan. Information said that Corrigan and his brother, Harry, had drifted into the Virginia city in 1932. During the three years that they stayed there, Douglas earned a reputation as a natural flier and a "fellow who could make a motor hum."

Only ill result that could come from Corrigan's flight is punishment by the Bureau of Air Commerce. There again, however, the flier is lucky. The director of the bureau is named Denis Mulligan.

In a radio speech last night Mulligan said that Corrigan had had a Commerce Department pilot's license since 1928. He started his speech with the statement:

"'Gone-Again' Corrigan has finally realized his ambition to visit the land of his forefathers."

'Air's Glamour Gone' —And Then Corrigan

The days of glamour and romance in aviation are over, Clinton Hester, administrator of the new Civil Aeronautics Authority, wrote in a speech prepared for delivery over the radio last night.

Then came yesterday's interest-gripping dash from New York to Ireland by Douglas Corrigan in his "flying crate," as if answering the challenge.

"The days of barnstorming at county fairs in flying box crates held together with baling wire are over," the administrator had written. "Today, high competence, thorough planning and businesslike administration are the keystones in aviation as in every other great industry. A large part of the glamour and romance has gone out of flying and as romanticists we may deplore this, but as practical persons we know that a dependable new mode of travel is not permanently built on romance. Aviation has survived the excitement of childhood, the fevers of adolescence. It has attained mature years and with them it has acquired the undramatic responsibilities that accompany maturity."

Mayor's Son Greets Theft-Trial Delay

John Aaron Pruitt, 18, son of Norman A. Pruitt, mayor of Mount Rainier, Md., was granted a continuance until August 1 yesterday when arraigned in Police Court on a charge of robbery.

Judge Edward M. Curran continued the case at request of Pruitt's attorney. Bail was set at $500.

Pruitt was arrested last week with Charles L. Gainus, 17, also of Mount Rainier, after a woman reported her pocketbook snatched. The purse later was found, police said, in the wreckage of young Pruitt's machine. Gainus' case will be taken to Juvenile Court.

Party Ends 2d Leg Of Canyon Voyage

Grand Canyon, Ariz., July 18 (AP). The Nevills boat expedition landed late today at the mouth of Bright Angel Creek on the floor of the Grand Canyon, completing the second leg of a dangerous journey down the swirling Colorado River.

The three boats bearing the four men and two women left Lee's Ferry, Ariz., last Wednesday on the second lap of the 666-mile itinerary from Green River, Utah, to Lake Mead.

Montana 'Hopper Invasion Spreads

Sidney, Mont., July 18 (AP).—Eastern Montana's crop-ruining grasshopper hordes moved north and west today, menacing grain fields in 16 counties, or roughly one-fourth of the State.

Crop losses, largely in small grains, ranged from 40 to 100 per cent, Dr. Harlow B. Mills, State entomologist, estimated.

'Crate' Is Ready To Return, Flier Says at Dublin

Flight

was California with the words:

"My compass went wrong."

He had landed his monoplane near a new-type, twin-engined plane of the Irish Sea Airways which was just about to hop to London.

Passengers clambered out to look. They whistled and one remarked: "It's a curious looking affair."

But the American didn't think so.

He patted his ship again and repeated:

"All it needs is a bit of grease. Then it will take me back to New York."

(In an interview broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System, Corrigan was asked if he intended to return by plane, and stated: "Oh, no. It'll probably be on a boat. I don't know.")

At Cudahy's Home.

Astonished officials asked so many questions they almost forgot to ask him for his landing papers.

"Forget it," he grinned when they did get around to that. "Really, I thought I was going to California."

He had 320 gallons of gasoline when he left Floyd Bennett Airport yesterday, of which about 30 remained when he landed. He carried half a gallon of water and some chocolate cookies.

Corrigan, by his flight, joined a long list of noted solo transatlantic fliers, including Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, the late Amelia Earhart and the late Wiley Post.

The United States Minister speeded to the airport as soon as he heard of the Californian's arrival. The flier told him this story:

"The pivot of my compass stuck and didn't come loose until near the end of the flight. I came East instead of heading for California.

"I didn't have any way of checking my compass for 18 hours.

"I flew between 5,000 and 6,000 feet in banks of clouds. Only in spots did I get a glimpse of the ocean.

"I came into rain and dropped 1,500 feet. But still I didn't see anything to indicate my course. When I got out of the rain I rose to 5,000 feet.

"The first thing I saw near land were some fishing smacks, but even then I thought I was off the Pacific coast. It was only when I came over land that I realized I was not over California.

Houses Looked Different.

"I could see houses and the layout of the country were different. I crossed from one coast to the other and then went down the eastern coast until I hit Dublin."

"I then headed out for Baldonnel and here I am.

"I had intended to fly across the Atlantic to Ireland and had studied maps—but this time I was heading back to Los Angeles. Honestly."

At these words there was a sparkle in the airman's eyes. There was another in Cudahy's.

"Come on and have a bath and dinner," the minister said. "I have a bed or you at home."

"Remarkable," Says Hughes.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., July 18 (U.P.).—"It's very remarkable."

Howard Hughes, who girdled the globe in less than four days, took off his famous brown fedora and scratched his head for 30 seconds today, looking at the sky, before he offered that succinct comment on Douglas Corrigan's transatlantic hop in a $900 crate. He emphasized the "very."

Mexicans Expecting Roosevelt Visit in 1939

Mexico City, July 18 (AP).—Government officials said today President Roosevelt plans a visit to Mexico next year. These sources said the President "announced in an informal manner that he has the intention of visiting Mexico next year" when Capt. Roberto Gomez Maqueo, of the Mexican gunboat G-29, called upon him aboard the U. S. S. Houston off Lower California Sunday.

N. Y. Irish Pledge Help for Corrigan

New York, July 18 (AP).—The considerable Irish population of New York rallied 'round tonight to put up any necessary defense Douglas Corrigan may need for flying to Ireland without official sanction.

"Congratulations," cabled Charles V. Halley, jr., commissioner of transportation, "on your wonderful flight. Your error in landing in Dublin instead of California pleased many people. If you are in difficulties, be assured that there are many thousands here who will be glad to render any assistance possible."

PotterPalmer Sued For Divorce in Fla.

Sarasota, Fla., July 10 (U.P.).—Mrs. Pauline Warren Palmer, New York heiress, today filed suit for divorce fro mPotter D'Orsay Palmer, 31, Chicago and Sarasota. The complaint was "withdrawn" immediately and no details were made public.

The Palmers were married last summer.

Uniforms Ordered For Aides of Duce

Rome, July 18 (AP).—Premier Mussolini today ordered all government civilian employes to wear uniforms henceforth during working hours.

Il Duce's newspaper Il Popolo d' Italia described the order as "another step in the spiritual mobilization of the country."

Truckers in Red In Atlantic States, I. C. C. Informed

Philadelphia, July 18 (AP).—Freight carrying motor trucks in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and New York operated at a loss of $1,321,447 since the beginning of 1937, the Interstate Commerce Commission was told today.

About 400 shippers, truck owners and railroad representatives attended a hearing to determine whether the commission should order a revision of trucking rates and a general stabilization of the industry.

D. T. Waring, Washington, D. C., counsel for the rate commission of motor truck carriers, presented a statement showing that so far this year 149 carriers have lost $326,447 in addition to $995,000 last year.

HOW TO HAVE A COOL, QUIET BEDROOM
EVEN ON HOT NIGHTS

DON'T toss and turn in a hot, stuffy bedroom. Find out today how you can be cool and comfortable the rest of the summer—the rest of your life. A low-cost, Air Pilot room conditioner makes your bedroom as comfortable as an outdoor sleeping porch. The Air Pilot brings into your bedroom a comfortable, fresher outdoor air. It shuts out honking automobile horns, next-door radios, and noises that steal away rest and sleep. It filters out dust dirt, and irritating pollen. And it is as easy to install as a radio.

TRY IT FOR 7 DAYS

Take advantage of this wonderful offer today. You can get an Air Pilot in your home and keep it for ONE ENTIRE WEEK.

Under our trial plan, at a small installation charge you can prove how the Air Pilot fills your room with cool, clean, filtered air . . . how it shuts out disturbing noises. YOU CAN DO ALL OF THIS BEFORE YOU BUY . . . without any obligation.

Don't put off this trial. For full information tear out this ad and send it with your name and address to Dept. M, Standard Air Conditioning, Inc., 1622 H St. N.W., Washington. But it will be much quicker to telephone NA. 8690 now and say: "Tell me how I can try air conditioning without obligation." Standard Air Conditioning, Inc., is a subsidiary of American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation.

Relations With The Reich.

Before Hitler came into power, the United States and Germany were on exceptionally friendly terms. War-time animosities had long ago disappeared in this country, being replaced by the genuine friendliness toward and admiration of Germany which is natural to Americans. The feeling here was widespread that the Reich had not been given a square deal by the Treaty of Versailles. Nowhere did the German demand for treaty revision receive a more sympathetic hearing.

The present status of German-American relations is very different. Fifteen years of growing good-will have been completely destroyed in five. Yet, as pointed out by Paul B. Taylor in a current report of the Foreign Policy Association, this antagonism "does not arise from current disputes or from any danger of attack by one country on the other."

What is responsible, as his careful and objective analysis makes plain, is primarily an instinctive American antipathy toward what Nazi Germany represents—the ruthless suppression of all individual rights; the unrelenting persecution of the Jews; the virulent assault on all dissenters from totalitarianism and last, but by no means least, the dangerously aggressive foreign policies of the Hitler regime.

Despite strong isolationist sentiment in this country there is stronger realization that isolationism is only wish-fulfillment writ large; that under the impact of present-day realities the United States cannot remain immune from the play of world forces. In particular there is a widespread and understandable fear that should Europe get embroiled in war this nation will find it impossible to stay out. For that reason, opposition to the aggressor states, Germany among others, is growing. But in Germany's case the flames of hostility are being constantly fed by acts which outrage American sentiments and traditions.

During the five years since Hitler came into power there has been much Nazi propaganda in this country. But favorable propaganda of the spoken and written word has been more than offset by adverse propaganda of the deed. It is the Third Reich's actions which have alienated American public opinion and outraged American sentiment. And that, in the long run, will prove for the Hitler regime a loss outweighing many of its gains.

Permanence Amid Instability.

Laymen as well as lawyers will be able to extract much valuable and timely information from the current issue of "Law and Contemporary Problems," published by the School of Law of Duke University. The summer number of this well-edited quarterly is a symposium in which various experts analyze the techniques by which trustees are endeavoring to meet the problems thrust upon them by the financial and economic problems of the day.

In an era of shifting currency values, fluctuating and unpredictable changes in business activity, and erratic or managed prices, the trustee's life is not a happy one. Reconciling the ideal of "permanent investment" with the facts of a dynamic economic world is a difficult task at best. Trustee responsibility is emphasized when, as today, the trust increases in popularity along with growing instability of investment values.

Especially revelatory of the unsettled conditions resulting from prolonged and severe business depression is an article devoted to the modernization of legal lists—that is, lists of securities eligible for investment of trustee funds and funds of savings institutions. Unless trust instruments provide otherwise, many States require trustees to invest property in accordance with statutory rules. United States Government bonds, State and municipal issues, railway and public utility bonds, and real estate mortgages are usually found on these lists.

In view of the financial plight of the railways, the unsound fiscal practices of some of the political subdivisions of government, the dearth of new mortgages and the unsatisfactory character of many existing ones, it is evident that trustees have much to worry about. It is extremely difficult to establish new investment standards that will recognize changed conditions without sacrificing safety of principal or being so restrictive as to impede the placement of sums awaiting investment.

The discussions in the Duke University symposium deal with a variety of business and legal devices which have been developed to prevent the frictions and maladjustments affecting trust funds in a "world of unstable values." This instability is "not that normal degree of uncertainty which explains why we need trustees rather than mere custodians, but an instability which has led some to question whether the trustee's undertaking to conserve wealth can long remain feasible at all."

Fortunately the pessimistic implications of this statement are relieved by the effort here made to deal constructively with a problem which is of vital importance to all privately endowed institutions, to say nothing of individual trusts.

The HOLC As A Test Case.

Operation of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is proving a severe test of the Government's ability to conduct a valuable social enterprise in businesslike fashion. The organization was set up to provide a breathing spell for hard-pressed home owners threatened with foreclosure during the worst part of the depression. It is not a charitable institution. Yet it is subject to persistent attacks because it is properly unwilling to subsidize a limited group of home owners who are either unable or unwilling to meet their obligations.

Short of outright subsidization the HOLC has gone about as far as possible in extending governmental aid to a group of private individuals. It took over more than 1,000,000 mortgages that had been in default an average of about two years. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that it should have acquired approximately 92,000 houses. Indeed, that record of itself suggests that the HOLC has been lenient in dealing with home owners in distress.

Only about 55 per cent of the homes acquired by the HOLC have been taken through foreclosure of mortgages because the owners had no prospects of continuing their payments. More than 18 per cent of these homes have been abandoned by their owners. In over 5 per cent of the cases the home has been voluntarily placed in the hands of the HOLC after the death of the owner. A much larger group, constituting 20.5 per cent of the homes acquired by the HOLC, were taken because of the refusal rather than the inability of owners to meet their obligations.

Apparently these owners concluded that they could take advantage of the Government's generosity without suffering the usual consequences of a policy of calculated default. A breakdown of the standards under which the HOLC operates would be likely to increase the number who thus seek to exact bounties from a government which has extended a helping hand to them.

As an indication of the very sympathetic treatment accorded honest borrowers by the HOLC, it should be noted that nearly 100,000 mortgagors who are in arrears, and who are paying less than their current obligations, are being carried because of their evidence of good faith. Indeed, the HOLC makes a policy of not foreclosing a mortgage so long as the owner is co-operative, unless his prospect of resuming full payments is plainly hopeless. Even then the case is subjected to seven different examinations before foreclosure proceedings are instituted.

In view of the fact that the average dispossessed borrower has had free occupancy of his home for more than four years, and has paid no taxes for five years, it is impossible to demonstrate that the HOLC is guilty of injustices to homeowners. Its policy, lenient though it is, may work hardships in some cases. But these could not be overcome without making outright gifts not contemplated by Congress.

When a government is steadily expanding its business ventures of various kinds it is of double importance that they be efficiently operated. When congressional delegations seek to use agencies like the HOLC for the subsidization of special groups they strike an indirect blow at the whole theory of socialistic enterprise. For if political bounties are added to the operation of Federal business organizations they will soon or late collapse of their own weight.

In two veto messages President Roosevelt has pointed out the serious consequences of making Federal land-bank loans at rates that involve a drain upon the Treasury. It would be an even greater blunder to raise the presumption that home owners in persistent default are entitled to retain their property at the expense of more scrupulous taxpayers.

His Dizziness.

There is low rumbling which, at this particular season, many drowsy folk may mistake for the growl of distant thunder. But at least 35,000 people know better than that. They were at the ball game in Chicago on Sunday. They know that the sound is from the gates of oblivion swinging on their well-greased hinges. And they know that, for once, those gates have opened not to admit somebody, but to let somebody out.

Who is this that strolls so jauntily from stygian darkness into dazzling daylight? Certainly there is something familiar about him. We have seen him somewhere. Is it Rexford Tugwell? Can it be Howard Scott, the technocrat? Or Francis X. Bushman? No, no, no! Perhaps it is—why, bless our souls, it really is—Dizzy Dean!

Dizzy is in there again, pinning back their ears, one-two-three. All they can see of his fast one is sparks and smoke. His curve is like the course of carloadings over the years 1928 to 1936, inclusive. He sets them down with four hits.

For two and a half months we had been hearing less and less about the once illustrious Dizzy, and all of it to the effect that his star had set forever. Only the other day there were reports that he was preparing to sue his former employers, Mr. Breadon and the St. Louis Cardinals, charging them with having ruined his arm with overwork last season.

Hitherto, Mr. Dean has never been accused of excessive humility or pessimism. Since he came into public life some years ago, he has successfully kidded a great many of his fellow citizens on a good many matters, as much perhaps to their relish as his own. This time it would appear he has been kidding himself. If so, we rejoice that he has snapped out of it at last. Perhaps you could even find analogy in Dizzy Dean's supposedly incurable sore arm to a good many of the world's supposedly incurable troubles.

California Or Ireland.

Whatever the Bureau of Air Commerce may have to say about Douglas Corrigan's unsanctioned hop to Ireland, the world in general will thrill to the young Texan's breath-taking courage. To play the 100-to-1 odds experts place on the flight, and for stakes reduced almost to a bagatelle after Howard Hughes' exploit of only a few days ago, takes more nerve than judgment. But of course, there was the historic "luck of the Irish" to be counted in.

When the cheering dies down, the flight will doubtless appear as a mere stunt. As such, moreover, it will be deplored. Recent aviation developments have given rise to the hope that flying is about to emerge from its adventuresome adolescence and take on the dependability of maturity. For many months now the public has been groomed to accept as a matter of course the transatlantic flying service scheduled to begin this fall. Then all of a sudden along comes Corrigan and wins headlines which, by the very nature of his antique craft and its inadequate equipment, serve only to revive doubts as to the feasibility of soaring safely over the Atlantic.

To a large extent aviation can discount these fears by comparing Corrigan's flight to the trips regularly essayed across the Atlantic by adventurers sailing home-made catboats. In addition, the moral can be stressed that even antiquated motors and wings can now be made to perform remarkable feats. Flying in 1938, they can say, is so automatic that nowadays an absent-minded person taking off for California is apt to fetch up in Ireland, begorrah!

Interpreter Of The East.

The untimely death of Grover Clark, who succumbed to a heart attack at Charlottesville last Sunday, removes an outstanding authority on the Far East at a time when American interest in developments in that part of the world is steadily increasing.

Born in Japan of American missionary parents 46 years ago, Mr. Clark's relatively brief life coincided with a period of radical change in the traditionally unchanging Orient. Of that change he was, through long residence in Japan and China as teacher, editor and newspaper correspondent, a sympathetic observer and a talented interpreter.

Nor did his interest in the Far East slacken when, in 1930, he transferred his residence from China to the United States. As lecturer at Columbia, and more recently at the University of Denver, as trustee of the China Institute, as adviser on the Far East to the Social Science Research Council, Mr. Clark helped greatly in the difficult task of making the East and West meet. It was in this work, while serving as leader of a round-table forum on Far Eastern developments at the Institute of Public Affairs, that he fatally overtaxed his strength. His deep and well-balanced understanding of factors and forces operating on the other side of the Pacific will be widely missed.

Stricken Eagle.

There are millions of Americans who have never seen an eagle. There are thousands who wouldn't recognize one if they saw it. It is not surprising, therefore, that a Union Grove, Md., man, seeing one walking in his yard, should shoot it, thinking it a chicken hawk. It was a bald eagle with a wingspread of 6 feet 6 inches, but its size did not save it.

Some of these days the only eagle we'll know will be the one to be found on our currency. The real thing will have become a side partner in oblivion of that other notable bird, the dodo.

But just before that happens somebody will discover that it is simply outrageous to allow so noble a bird to become extinct, particularly as we have made its name and fame a symbol of the qualities we ascribe to the United States as a Nation.

A lot of imagination goes into the creation and use of a symbol. The eagle, for instance, has a fine constitution, and forever exercises the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; but the only Bill of Rights it knows is its own, a hooked beak. It has courage and so have we; but courage is the commonest virtue in the world. It is possessed by every living thing in greater or less degree and kind, and so it is nothing to scream about.

But as a symbol the eagle stands for everything we have fought for, lived for and now strive for. Kindly sentiment should prompt its preservation. The very fact that the eagle is dying out in this country proves our lack of one good quality the bird possesses. The eagle is far-seeing.

A Massachusetts man, 83, this year discontinued a birthday stunt of standing on his head. It takes all of us a long time to learn that a lot of things we do don't get us anywhere.

The average person needs a boss, a chaperon, a nurse, a guardian angel, a father confessor, a godmother, somebody to pat him on the back and someone to kick him in the pants.

The Wright Plane.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial, "The Wright Plane," in The Post of July 11 discusses a subject of national interest. According to it, an association is going to make an effort to have the Wright brothers' first airplane returned from a London museum and enshrine it in our own country.

In 1903 Prof. Langley, who was then secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, was experimenting with his flying machine in Washington; the Wright brothers with their machine were also experimenting at Kitty Hawk, N. C. On December 17, the world learned of the Wright brothers' success and all countries and many societies, excepting the Smithsonian Institution, have acknowledged the performance of their airplane and have honored them for their achievement. Prof. Langley was unable to make his machine fly and the Wright brothers with their machine were the first to make a successful flight with the machine carrying a man.

When the Langley machine was placed on exhibition in the National Museum there was placed on the machine a label stating that it was "The first man-carrying aeroplane in the history of the world capable of sustained free flight," even though Prof. Langley himself was unable to make it fly. Later the label was removed. But the false and misleading information was also printed in the records and publications of the Smithsonian Institution to the discredit of the Wright brothers.

It is the duty of the officials of the Smithsonian Institution to give impartial recognition to inventions and the achievement of inventors. If they will correct their records and publications in regard to the Wright brothers' achievement, then Mr. Orville Wright can be asked if he will consent to the return of his airplane to our country and no doubt the request will be granted.

JUSTICE.

Washington, July 16.

Ice Plant Fire.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a member of the Washington Board of Trade I take this opportunity, in behalf of the welfare of the District of Columbia, to direct attention to the stupidity of some official in charge of the District Fire Department in sending in a general fire alarm on July 11 to fight the fire on upper Thirteenth street at the American ice plant.

This plant had not been in operation for over one year, and at the time of this fire was being demolished by a local wrecking company. Under these conditions there was absolutely no reason whatever for calling out substantially, if not all of the District fire apparatus, therefore, endangering thousands of lives of pedestrains in all sections of the city and also subjecting all other property in the city to the fire hazard for lack of fire apparatus.

Such lack of judgment calls for a severe reprimand, if not dismissal, for the official upon whose shoulders such responsibility rests.

CHARLES F. CALHOUN, JR.

Virginian's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why should there be denunciation of "Greater Germany" and its inexcusable seizure of and acts in Austria? Once the States here were as separate as Germany and Austria and when they united for better government, some expressly reserved the right to withdraw and several, from time to time, declared that right. Who or what had a right to prevent their withdrawal, when they found the government, as being exercised, not good for them?

President Roosevelt at Gettysburg spoke of the "wisdom and humanity of Abraham Lincoln" in one place, and in another he said, "Here in our land we give thanks that, avoiding war, we seek our ends through the peaceful processes of popular government under the Constitution." Had Lincoln had wisdom and the idea of mass humanity he would have pursued this course; the way was opened to him in the compromises, conventions and conferences offered by the South. Had Lincoln spoken with wisdom and straight-forwardness, it is probable no other State would have followed South Carolina; and had even Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri joined the Southern States outside the United States, still if reason ruled, there would always have been a whole united front in case of foreign invasion and as to mutual benefits.

The United States now recognizes the right of secession and the right of self-government for small as well as large areas. It concedes that grievances of minorities must be listened to and corrected and that the worker must have security.

Lastly, it is slowly reducing protective and high tariffs by the more sane and Christian reciprocal treaties. Christian America believes in at least "doing unto others as we would they would do unto us."

VERITAS.

Holdcroft, Va., July 13.

Reply And Applause For Mr. Barefoot.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In order to win an argument your correspondent T. A. B. Barefoot accuses me of being influenced by Japanese propaganda. If the World Almanac (from which I secured all my data) is Japanese propaganda then I must plead guilty.

In my other letter in which I set forth these figures to explain my inability to see "how economic and military pressure of powerful nations will solve the hunger problems of an island nation that is overpopulated for its size," your correspondent assumes that I am upholding Japan's actions. Such is not the case, for I heartily disapprove of Japan's foolishness and feel sure that it will end in disaster to Japan even if we have enough common sense to stay out of it. I have only the warmest of friendship for the Chinese and sincerely hope they come out on top, but we must not get ourselves mixed into it, if we expect the issue to be settled properly and finally.

In spite of Mr. Barefoot's arguments as to Japan's territorial sources of food (which then must feed double the population I mentioned), I still maintain that hunger is the fundamental reason why island nations such as Japan and England where the population is too great for the amount of home farm acreage must depend upon military and naval superiority and tactics in order to assure themselves enough to eat. If by some supernatural power it were possible to shove Japan over against the mainland of Asia, and shove the British Isles over against the mainland of Canada, then all of their hunger problems would be automatically solved, as well as their military and naval problems.

Instead of being asleep (as Mr. Barefoot claims), I have seen the evidence of pacifist lobbying, as I read the newspapers about as well as anyone else, but I have also seen greater evidence of the lobbying and propaganda for the militarists in the headlines almost daily in nearly any newspaper that one can pick up.

EX-MARINE, NO. 4.

Washington, July 16.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: This is to express my appreciation to Mr. T. A. B. Barefoot for his letters, and to The Post for carrying them.

As a member of the audience at Mr. Barefoot's debate with those he so aptly styles "the cringing pacifists," I feel that his wealth of information has been handled so as to counter practically every point his opponents have offered.

Insult To Cannibals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I sometimes wonder why writers apply the adjectives "beastly" or "savage" to atrocities recounted in the press of today. Neither beasts nor savages ever approximated "civilized" man in the ability or the desire to murder and destroy. The tiger and cannibal never killed for the joy of killing but only under the urge of hunger, and even then one victim at a time, not by thousands. It's a gratuitous insult to the cannibal to call the unprovoked military murder of Spanish, Chinese and Ethiopian women and children savagery. "Fiendishness" is a better word for it. From the cannibal's viewpoint the civilized man is a degenerate.

George Seen Sustained.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Harpers for July an article, "News From Siberia," tells of cooperative farming by farmers who own their land.

Under Article 6 of the Russian constitution, "The land, its deposits, waters, forests, * * * are state property, that is property of the whole people." The constitution provides further for allotment of agricultural land to households, but only for collective farming, excepting garden plots given for household use. These householders are assuredly not landowners in our understanding of the term, with power to sell or otherwise dispose of their holdings. They are merely land users, or state tenants for agricultural production under state control.

There is no private ownership of land in Russia, no land monopoly save by the state. Hence she has no land inflation or booms to keep farming in the red and usher in depressions with their breadlines and mass unemployment. Here is where she has one up on the totalitarians and the rest of us still feeding land sharks. Whatever may be thought of the rest of her experiment, she is giving a big demonstration in what Henry George and his following have long been telling us that a free earth is more essential to prosperity and contentment of the governed, than the political handouts of free speech and free pulpit, which however desirable seem to be offering less and less in the matters of stomach and pocketbook lining.

Suggestion To Car Owners.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On a hot night recently a kind friend asked me to go for an auto ride; out in the open where it is cool.

The invitation set me thinking and I am passing it along for what it is worth. It is directed to the many motorists who have vacant seats in their cars and who go for long cool rides in the evenings.

Why not call some friend who does not own a car or who does not drive and give him an hour of what to you is only a drive, but what to the weary, heat-tortured soul who cannot get out "in the open" an evening of real pleasure and benefit?

Refugee Problems.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Where is there any humanity and anything but discrimination and prejudice in only helping German refugees? There are refugees in and from Spain, Ethiopia, Palestine, Russia, China, etc. We have our own race problem! We have our own C. I. O. problem. Westwood, Calif., has just exiled 125 C. I. O.'s after beatings, shootings not unlike those in Germany. Oregon reports an anti-Jew fracas.

Let us not take sides. Let Europe fight its own fights.

The Post Impressionist

Captive Samovar.

IF EVER I walk into the Smithsonian again, it will be with deep respect. For every article there is classified and labeled as to its exact bearing on our national life. The dinosaur bears a card telling where he was found, when he lived and just what sort of a dinosaur he was; the bronze Indian is placarded with the sculptor's name, the occasion for the sculpture, and even, most likely, an interpretation.

We are badly spoiled to take this orderliness as a matter of course. It was a shock to me, personally, to learn that there are people in the Nation who think a collection of unrelated bric-a-brac is a museum.

* * *

In St. Augustine, Fla., stands the oldest house in America—except, of course, for some thousands of Indian adobe dwellings. There are several oldest houses in St. Augustine, but the one I have in mind is sponsored by the chamber of commerce and operated by something called, as well as I can remember, the Ladies Museum Society. Maybe it's called the Historical Association—it's immaterial.

In such a shrine we should expect to find some of the original furnishings, perhaps; or, at least, carefully selected period fittings like those used at Stratford in Virginia. The museum society, however, has shown the same fanciful quality in its administration as a lady board of managers for a hospital. The first thing that strikes the eye is a portrait of Chauncey Depew, manufactured of X's on a typewriter. There is a reason why this work of art hangs on the stairway, but I don't want to get ahead of my story.

At the top of the stairs is a central gallery, surrounded by three or four bedrooms. In one is a bed occupied by Maria Theresa of Austria as a child, bought by the society after the first Chicago World Fair. In another is a bed of Spanish royalty, similarly acquired. To do the ladies justice, a third bedroom does contain a bed used by Hernandez, the officer who, acting under orders, captured the Indian patriot Osceola under a flag of truce.

* * *

The museum proper is in an annex to the oldest house. There is every justification for a museum to exist in such a spot. The rich history of St. Augustine under three flags could be portrayed by relics of each regime. Relics of the early Indian times might mingle with articles from the Spanish establishment, the British occupancy and the period of development by the United States.

The most striking piece in the collection, however, is a life-size figure of a Hindoo Priest, "made of clay from the Ganges River" (to quote the label). Also catching the eye is a monumental brass thing marked "Russian Samovar." On the wall are framed autographs of several Presidents' wives, including Mesdames Coolidge, Harding, Wilson and Taft. These, we are gravely informed, were inscribed especially for the museum.

In one corner is to be found the explanation of the honor to Mr. Depew. He donated not only two suits of Spanish armor, but a German machine gun (1915 model) as well. These gifts stand side by side. Nearby is a frame full of German postage stamps, issued in the inflationary period when it might take as much as 10,000,000,000 marks to carry a letter. A whole glass case is devoted to foreign currency contributed by visitors to the museum. Canadian bills are predominant, but there is some Greek money and a large United States dollar of the kind that was replaced some years ago.

A number of cases are filled with glass and chinaware, including a dinner set of the famous blue Chinese pattern known to home and boarding-house. Some of this collection, no doubt, is valuable and typical of St. Augustine periods. What tags there are, however, fail to convey any idea of the stuff's history.

* * *

I don't mean to say the museum contains nothing that makes sense. There is a cannon ball fired by Oglethorpe, the stout Presbyterian the British sent to Georgia to protect the Carolinas from the Spaniards. There is also, however, a mantel set of brown stone, consisting of a clock and two maidens. This Victorian treasure is not labeled in such a way as to betray why it should be in the museum, except it was loaned by somebody.

Item: a couple of dozen badly deteriorated photographs of bebraided Indians in beaver hats. Undoubtedly these pictures are a unique record of some phase in St. Augustine's history—what phase, perhaps no one knows; for although each photo has a number, the numbers have no text. In a few more years, unless some preservative measures are taken, these simple faces will have faded forever.

Osceola, though—Osceloa has been treated with much more respect. The honest chief who refused to escape from Fort San Marcos has a corner of the yard all to himself. In a tent are waxen figures, reminiscent of the State fair, representing him and his wife.

Most startling of all is the Scotch postoffice. This is a vine-covered summer house in which any of the thousands of visitors may hang a slip of paper on which he has written his name. Most of them do. I presume that by thus satisfying an elementary human desire, the museum society hopes to protect the walls of its more private rooms.

The Once Over

Wanted: Name For A Lady.

This department today launches a crusade for the renaming of that round-the-world plane! Come one, come all! It's a matter of momentous importance.

• • • •

What are Americans going to call this gallant ship in the years to come? Can you imagine looking at the valiant clipper in 1945 or 1950 in some museum and saying with intense feeling: "That's The New York World's Fair, 1939?" Huh?

• • • •

"The New York World's Fair, 1939." What a name for a great lady! What a monicker for a queen of the skies! Why, it's no name at all. It's a bill poster, a space ad, an automobile marker!

• • • •

Arise Americans! Protest now! "The New York World's Fair, 1939." might have been excused as a name during the flight. The purpose of such a name was purely publicity, and it is dollars to crullers that Howard Hughes winced when he gave in to Mr. Whalen's arguments.

• • • •

But the silver heroine of an epic cruise has just got to have a name that suits her. It must be something with sentiment to it. It has got to be a name people can laugh or cry over.

• • • •

Imagine "Slim" Lindbergh's plane going down into history as "The St. Louis Program for a Model Municipality. Series Four," or "When in America See New York's Park System. Open All Night!"

• • • •

• • • •

The "Winnie Mae" . . . there was a name. It had personality. You could get affectionate about her. A name like that gets into your heart.

• • • •

"Spirit of St. Louis" . . . that was pretty good, too. It didn't leave out the advertising angle completely, but that "spirit" part gave emotional lift. There was no trouble warming up to her.

• • • •

But "New York World's Fair, 1939." Phooey! It's like referring to Christopher Columbus' ships by number or recording Fulton's first steamboat in the histories as "The Hudson River for Results."

• • • •

Suggestions are in order. How about something like "Silver Sue?" Or "Gertie the Girdler?"

• • • •

Send in your suggestions now, before it is too late.

• • • •

Howard Hughes is going to feel awfully impatient the first time he gets into an auto and is caught in a traffic jam.

Five Nazi leaders got jail terms for American activities on Long Island. The jury was only out 15 minutes, indicating that it was hurrying to beat the Bund.

Now that the round-the-world flight is a thing of the past we can all resume that argument over Norma Shearer's selection to play Scarlett O'Hara. Let's see . . . where was it we left off?

Add similes: Lucky as a deaf man in a railroad station during the departures for the kiddy camps.

"With all those veterinarians in New York at one time, a lot of people were curious as to what politician was sick there," says I. Wannaknow.

The Office Skeptic insists that there was no such thing as that Howard Hughes trip around the world. And then there is the fellow who says it wasn't on the level and that Hughes had a double at both Omsk and Fairbanks.

Reading the details of the Hughes trip brings a pretty depressing and futile feeling to the man who takes the family out for a week-end trip and finds it takes him three days to make about 200 miles.

Roosevelt And 1940

A Canadian View.

Third Term Seen Possible.

THE FIRST PRIMARY elections following the Roosevelt campaign tour through the West have gone heavily for the New Deal President.

This follows an upturn in favor of Roosevelt in the Gallup poll. Roosevelt stock in the Gallup graph has been falling slowly since January, but took a turn for the better this last week. The reason given was that Roosevelt always gains when Congress is not sitting.

These "straws" will not be unnoted by the American politicians—and voters. They have the effect of a significant by-election under the British system.

The American system of making the party leader a President is always a little confusing to our people. We are accustomed to a King or a governor general who is above politics. But we think it quite natural that our Prime Minister—who is the real ruler—shall go out and campaign as often and as passionately as he chooses. On the whole, our system seems to work much better. For instance, President Roosevelt in his present campaign tour is compelled constantly to pull his punches. He commends his chosen candidates in the mildest possible manner, sometimes simply by letting them ride with him (Roosevelt) in a carriage or even only ignoring their opponents.

There are several more States yet to vote that have been or will be visited by Democratic Leader Roosevelt. The results in Oklahoma will doubtless affect them. If news of how Nova Scotia has gone is thought likely to swing the voting in British Columbia during the last couple of hours on election day, there will be no surprise that news from Oklahoma may influence the voting in Kentucky, Ohio and California when it has much longer to soak in.

A more severe test of the Roosevelt magnetism will come on his return journey. Then he is expected to land in Georgia and visit three States in which the sitting and popular Senators are anti-New Deal.

• • • •

THE PETITION from 4,000 steel workers in Pueblo, Colo., to the President to seek a third term was significant only in the fact that Roosevelt did not immediately put the crown from him. If his mind were made up, he would have been very apt to seize this opportunity to stop promptly any such movement. Of course, it is just possible that he thinks that doubt on this point might help his faction in the coming elections.

But it will be wiser for opponents of President Roosevelt to reckon with the possibility of his running again. Good political judges in the United States have said right along that if he runs he could be nominated, and if he were nominated he might be elected. The picture still stands of the rich dowager riding in an open carriage down Fifth avenue with a "Landon" button on her bosom, while in front ride a driver and a footman and behind two flunkies, all wearing "Roosevelt" buttons. So long as the workers think of "F. D. R." as their friend he is a formidable candidate.

Then it seems likely that the "third-term" fetish is pretty well faded. It might work more damage against a ruler like Roosevelt, who is constantly pilloried as a dictator, than against an ordinary candidate. The Harvard boys hit off this idea when they started a "Roosevelt for King" club. But this ancient prejudice can hardly be depended upon to stop Roosevelt if he is again nominated. Should he make a good showing in this summer's primaries and then again in the Congressional election in November, anything can happen.

Observer Sees Europe Anxiously Awaiting Czech Plan For Treatment Of Nazis; Fateful Decision Faces British.

Paris.

BEFORE THE END of this month the problem of Czechoslovakia will again be acute. For the Czechs will by that time have given out the texts of the laws and constitutional reforms which they are willing to make in order to satisfy the grievances of the German minority. The general principle of these reforms is already known, however, and unless there is a sudden and radical change of attitude in Prague or in Berlin, the Nazis will reject the reforms, the agitation will continue, and Europe will find itself in another great crisis.

LIPPMANN.

How serious a crisis it is to be will depend upon what British public opinion and the British government think about the issue. For the position of Britain is the most uncertain and the most important factor in the whole situation. There is no serious doubt about the rest of the problem. Thus it may be taken as certain that the Czechs will make many concessions but that they will not concede the main point which the Nazis insist upon. Having just been to Prague, I do not see how any one can have any doubt that the Czechs will not retreat beyond a certain point, and that at that point they are prepared to fight a war of annihilation if they are attacked.

Nor is there any real doubt. I think, that if the Czechs fight, the French will come to their assistance, and the best informed observers believe that Russia also will come to their assistance. It is equally certain, it would seem, that German policy will depend upon what the Germans believe the British will do. That is to say, if the British support the French and the Czechs, the Germans will almost certainly not precipitate a war; if the British stand aloof, the temptation to settle the issue by the use of force is likely to be overwhelming.

British Must Rate Concessions Of Czechs.

THE QUESTION for British opinion and for disinterested world opinion generally will be to decide whether the solution offered by the Czech government goes as far as it is humanly possible to go. For any one who examines the problem of the German minority in Czechoslovakia must, I think, conclude that in principle it is now insoluble.

The essence of the problem is that the Sudeten Germans have real grievances but that the remedy which they are now asking would destroy not only Czechoslovakia but would dismember and disrupt every state where there is a German population. The problem is tragic because the just grievances of the Germans outside the frontiers of the Reich cannot be remedied in terms of the Nazi philosophy. The mixed populations of Central Europe can find no basis of peace because the Nazis reject the principle of equal rights.

The Germans of Czechoslovakia are somewhat less than a quarter of the whole population, and there is no doubt that they have been discriminated against. They have not equal opportunity in the government service; they have just grievances about schools, language, and perhaps about the allocation of public funds. But this is not their fundamental grievance. Their fundamental grievance is that they are a minority, that, though they are Germans, they must live as citizens of a state named, after the two dominant nationalities, the Czechoslovak Republic. This is as if, instead of calling ourselves the United States of America, we had called ourselves New England, thus permanently marking the Dutch, Swedish, German, Irish inhabitants as a separate and inferior kind of citizen. No concessions about "minority rights" would ever satisfy them.

The real solution of the problem of Czechoslovakia would call for the creation of a new state, which, like Switzerland or the United States, would not recognize that there was such a thing as a dominant and a minority nationality within it.

Nazis Reject Theory Of Equal Rights For All.

BUT SUCH a solution is impossible where the German minority is Nazi. For as Nazis the Germans reject the idea of equal rights for all citizens of a state. They insist that as a minority they shall have absolute authority in a particular region, that within that region they may establish a dictatorship, that under that dictatorship they may suppress all German and Czech opposition, and that in the conduct of the central government they may act as representative of an outside power—namely, Germany. It is this that makes impossible a radical reconstruction of the Czechoslovak Republic.

For the only possible solution would be to follow the Swiss model, which is to decentralize power among the nationalities, or to follow the American model, which is to give equal rights to all individuals. Both solutions presuppose a common acceptance of the democratic principle. And this principle the Nazis reject root and branch.

Because they reject it, the democratic nations of the West are unable to ask the Czechs to make a radical solution of their problem. They cannot in the name of democracy and the idea of equal rights ask the Czechs to agree to the establishment of a Nazi dictatorship under orders from Berlin within the boundaries of their state. And because they cannot ask that, they are prevented from pressing the Czechs to do what will eventually have to be done if there is ever to be peace in that part of the world.

The best, therefore, that one can hope for at the present time are concessions by the Czechs to the Germans which would be just if granted to any other national minority. There ought not to be any minority. There ought to be only equal citizens of a state. But that solution is Utopian in a time when nationalism is so inflamed that it repudiates the principle of equal rights and the very notion that men must live and let live.

Berlin Hints "Break."

Berlin, July 18 (AP)—Government spokesmen in the last few days repeatedly have intimated important developments were in the offing concerning Czechoslovakia.

German officialdom is watching events in the neighboring republic with most intense interest, and with the conviction, one official said, that "there will be plenty of work in the next few weeks for foreign correspondents."

They have declined to disclose what the developments might include.

"Whatever may happen in the next days or weeks concerning Czechoslovakia," one authorized spokesman said, however, "there won't be any war.

"There will be provocative acts, but at the head of our government is a man who declines to be provoked. Soon the whole world will see who is responsible for the trouble in Czechoslovakia."

Berlin, July 18 (AP).—Driving home the Nazi principle the private individual counts for nothing, the state for everything, the government today published a decree imposing extensive duties in aid of the country's armed forces upon all citizens as a preparedness measure in event of war.

The decree, signed by Chancellor Adolf Hitler, Col. Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the army high command, and Interior Minister Wilhelm Frick, demands services or deliveries in kind from all civilians for military ends as and when they are required.

George In Paris

Cementing The Anglo-French Alliance.

THE STATE VISIT to France which King George VI and Queen Elizabeth are making this week was decided on many months ago. It could not, therefore, have been designed with the current international situation in mind. Yet it possesses a peculiar timeliness just the same.

The central fact in the Europe of today is the existence of two great combinations of power essentially antagonistic to one another. One is the Berlin-Rome axis. The other is the Anglo-French alliance.

Of the two the former is more spectacular; the latter more stable. The Berlin-Rome axis hides a host of basic antagonisms which some day may completely disrupt it. On the other hand, the Anglo-French combination rests on so firm a foundation of mutual necessity that it has weathered the storms of a quarter of a century. Indeed, it is stronger today than at any time since the World War.

• • • •

YET, oddly enough, it is not Paris-London but Berlin-Rome which appears to hold the whiphand in European affairs today. The democratic powers happen to be infinitely stronger in the potentials of power—military, financial and economic. But it is the totalitarian states that have the daring.

This has given Germany and Italy an enormous advantage which they have not hesitated to capitalize, individually in Ethiopia and Austria and jointly in Spain. But that advantage would be lost the moment Great Britain and France decide to oppose any further aggressions by all the force at their command.

It is an interesting circumstance, in this connection, that on the very few occasions when the two democratic powers have done just that the results have been rewarding. The firm stand taken by Great Britain and France against submarine piracy last year ended that growing menace to Mediterranean shipping. And similar firmness, coupled by Czechoslovakia's cool and efficient demonstration of her defensive power, turned the tide for peace last May when Europe came closer to plunging into a general war than at any time since 1914.

• • • •

THAT DEVELOPMENT was marked by a certain easing of tensions. But the respite has proved to be temporary. At this moment, while the British king and queen are receiving the enthusiastic plaudits of the French, the war clouds are again rolling in.

It is an ominous circumstance that now, as in the days immediately before the crisis of May 21-22, the regimented Nazi press is conducting another virulent campaign of abuse against Czechoslovakia. Without even awaiting the publication by the Prague government of its plan to extend the rights of German and other minorities in Czechoslovakia, Herr Goebbels' organs are already denouncing the prospective concessions as inadequate. What, in effect, this means is that only the complete capitulation of Czechoslovakia will satisfy the Reich.

This the Czech leaders are determined to oppose. And they are satisfied that in this endeavor they will have the support of France and of Soviet Russia.

• • • •

THE CZECHOSLOVAK problem, therefore, may soon once again test the effectiveness of the Franco-British alliance whose consummation the royal visit to Paris signalizes in such spectacular form. But insofar as that visit helps call attention to the fact that Great Britain and France are allied and determined to maintain their alliance, the presence in Paris of King George and Queen Elizabeth and the British statesmen who are accompanying them, may prove a sufficient warning to Berlin to exercise restraint with regard to Czechoslovakia.

The fact must be borne in mind, however, that the Anglo-French alliance while potentially capable of being exerted in areas as remote as the Far East, the Levant and Spain specifically binds the two powers only in one respect. The one clear fact regarding it is that Great Britain and France are mutually pledged to come to each other's assistance in the event either is attacked. It does not necessarily follow, therefore, that the two powers have a carefully worked-out, permanent policy with regard to the European or world situation generally.

• • • •

AS IT HAPPENS both nations have taken a joint stand in opposing Japan's thrust in the direction of Hainan Island in South China. They are also working together with a fair degree of harmony in the Near East where, recently, Turkey was won over to their side by the bribe of Alexandretta. But they do not yet see eye to eye either on the Spanish or the Czechoslovak problems.

With regard to the first France is reluctantly following Britain's lead; the opposite is true with respect to Czechoslovakia. But the very circumstance that in each instance one partner is hesistant makes for a certain confusion of counsel and a lack of vigor which gives the aggressors an advantage.

To what extent Great Britain and France can broaden the alliance so as to make it an effective force in Europe generally the present gathering in Paris may show.

Irving In St. Louis

By Sir John Martin-Harvey.

Fussie Stayed.

FUSSIE was Ellen Terry's dog; no sooner had he been introduced behind the scenes by that adorable lady than he promptly deserted his mistress and adopted Irving as his master. He lived to accompany Irving on one of his visits to America. The difficulty of persuading hotel managers to permit a guest to bring his dog into the hotel with him had a rather humorous result in St. Louis.

Fussie had been smuggled into his master's room, but was sniffed out by the irate hotel manager, who was for bidding the great Irving to leave, with bag, baggage and dog. Irving, however, was never at a loss when diplomacy was required.

"Sit down, my boy," he said to the most unresponsive hotel manager. "Have a cigar; we must have a chat about this. It won't do for the good folk of St. Louis to learn the truth about this splendid hotel of yours, you know."

"What truth?" asked the manager. "Rats," said Irving. "Rats?" exclaimed the proprietor. "Swarming with 'em," said Irving, with a gravely sympathetic nod. "Swarming——! We mustn't let the town hear of this, you know. You will be ruined, my boy."

"No one has ever seen a rat in my"—the landlord spluttered and shouted. "Ssh," whispered Irving. "Don't let your guests hear! Corridors alive with 'em. At the end of the week you'll be free. No, no, don't thank me; pleased to be of service. Have another whisky. Leave it to me. Newspaper men are coming to interview me tonight, I promise you I shan't breathe a word about the rats."

Progress Against Lynching

Until last Wednesday there had not been a reported lynching in the United States this year. Then a Negro was shot to death by a mob in Mississippi. A few days later another Negro, said already to have been fatally wounded, was taken from a sheriff in Georgia and killed—in the words of a coroner's jury—by "unknown parties." Thus ended the longest period in which the country has been free of lynching, since records began to be kept more than 50 years ago.

Despite these two recent lynchings, the importance of the previous achievement is manifest. The number of such deaths has been steadily, if irregularly, declining for many years. At the turn of the century, for example, the average number of lynchings exceeded 100 annually. Last year there were eight. Now for the first time six months have passed without a single instance of a mob's taking upon itself the duties of a public executioner.

To a certain extent the accomplishment may have been accidental, and it is not to be expected that lynching will entirely disappear next year or the year after. But once more the country is reminded that this evil can and eventually will be exterminated.

Cool Contemplation Of Outmoded Spring House On Pennsylvania Farm Brings Thought Of Excess White-Collar Jobs.

Avondale, Chester County, Pa.

HERE IN eastern Pennsylvania is—or was—the country of the spring house; here they were more common than elsewhere and more solidly built. The spring house belt ran from southern New York State through Pennsylvania and Maryland to the Potomac River. I never saw one in New England, nor in the West or South, though my observation may be incomplete. In level country they could hardly be—the existence of them depended on springs, which as a rule bubble up only on the slopes of hills in rolling country. Around the spring were built walls of strong masonry and over it a tight roof. The one on this farm, and many others in eastern Pennsylvania, had a second story; it was in fact a small house. Around it, to shade it and help keep it cool, were planted maple trees; on some farms a few oaks or beeches or locusts of the original forests were kept.

SULLIVAN.

When I was a boy here the spring house was a principal scene of farm activity. After milking each morning and evening, the milk, contained in shallow tin pails, was set on flat stones to cool—it was the only refrigeration we knew. Once a week, the accumulation was skimmed—the cream that had come to the top lifted off with a "skimmer," a shallow, circular, rimless vessel of thin metal with holes in the bottom, through which the watery part of the cream would drip back into the pail.

The cream was put into the churn. The one we used was a barrel-shaped vessel, smaller than a barrel, but larger than a keg. Churning was a plodding chore; the task was frequently mine. After the butter had "come," my mother would take it out and knead it in a mass until the last trace of liquid was squeezed out. Then she would take in her left hand the butter mold, a circular wooden disk about three inches in diameter, upon the top of which was a pattern deeply cut in the wood—the pattern on ours was a large strawberry. Using this as a base, she would build upon it short, large-bottomed cones, weighing a pound each. These, the following day, my father would take to market in the city, together with other farm products.

Institution Could Feed Troupe Of Men.

THE RESIDUE from the skimming and churning, the skimmed milk and the buttermilk, remained in the spring house. They, with the fresh milk, were incidents of the family diet. After the skimmed milk had stood in the cool water a few days, it turned into thick gobs of curds at the top, with watery whey beneath—we called it "bonny clabber"—another name is "cottage cheese," a term used by the Pennsylvania Dutch was "schmierkase." Along with the varieties of milk in the spring house were frequently rice puddings and other forms of cooked food set there to cool. At any time, except perhaps the day after the weekly churning, a troop of hungry men could make an ample meal without leave the spring house.

The spring house continued in use on our farm until about three years ago. Long after we had ceased to churn our own butter, after we had begun to send our milk to the city every day, it was put in the spring house to cool before shipment. But the company that bought the milk kept advancing the standard of coolness which the milk must have at the moment of delivery at the railroad station. Finally they said the milk must have a temperature not greater than 50 degrees. That, in times of hottest weather, and considering the trip to the railroad station—that was more than the ancient spring house could achieve. Thereupon there occurred under our eyes an abdication of nature to invention, of the old to the new. One of man's oldest ways of life gave way to one of the most modern—we set up an electric cooling apparatus in the barn.

Since then the old spring house has been out of use. Not once in a week does anyone enter it, even for a drink of water. In the eaves the birds have undisturbed nesting places. At nightfall the chimney swallows circle eerily about. From the ridge of the roof at night an occasional owl cries his melancholy "who-oo." Within, the pool is serene and still. From it a tiny stream trickles out to keep moist a spot where mint grows wild. Below, it flows into a bit of marshy land, where, in early March, the cry of the "knee-deeps" heralds the coming of spring.

Masons, Carpenters Unavailable For Work.

FOR THE SAKE OF sentiment and appearance, we keep the old spring house in order. About a year ago we noticed that one of the walls needed straightening and some rebuilding. But during the whole year we have been unable to get the work done. The two or three masons within a distance of several miles are busy and much sought after; jobs that can wait are postponed. It is the same with jobs of carpentering.

It occurs to me to wonder whether American youth has not taken too exclusively to white collar jobs. Masonry and carpentering are agreeable work, and much better paid than any comparable indoor jobs. And it is my strong conviction that, over the past generation, too many youths have gone to the cities—too many for their own good as individuals, and too many for the good of the country. Excessive migration to cities is one of the causes of the commotion through which the country is passing.

Gaily Decked Paris Awaiting Today's Visit of British Rulers

London's Royal Couple to Make First Journey to French Capital Since George V and Queen Mary Went There Before World War.

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, July 18.—Paris, gaily beflagged and decked with garlands, is eagerly awaiting the arrival of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth tomorrow afternoon—the first state visit of British sovereigns to the French capital since King George V and Queen Mary came here in the spring of 1914, a few months before the outbreak of the World War.

The streets of Paris tonight recalled London on the evening of the coronation last year. Responding to the appeal of Provost de Launay, president of the Paris municipal council, the Parisians have lavishly decorated their shops and homes with the British Union Jack and the French tricolor.

The most famous squares and avenues of the French capital—the Champs Elysees, the Place Vendome, the Place de La Concorde and the Grandes boulevards—have been festooned and ornately decorated for the occasion at a cost running into many thousands of dollars. Photographs of the king and queen are on display in nearly every shop, and the Paris busses are flying flags of the two nations.

Paris tonight, more than ever, deserves its name of "the City of Light." Its streets are jammed with sightseers and its hotels packed to capacity with guests, for thousands of English have come to this city to witness France's ovation to their sovereigns.

The arrival of the king and queen is set for 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. They will alight from the special train which is bringing them from Boulogne at the Bois de Boulogne—a small station situated on edge of the big woods that is Paris' Central Park. This station is used only on special occasions.

It was here King George V arrived on his state visit in 1914 and where Woodrow Wilson came to this city in 1918 when he led the American delegation to the peace conference.

When they descend from their train tomorrow, the British rulers will be welcomed by Albert Lebrun, President of the French Republic, and Mme. Lebrun. The heads of the allied states will then go into procession down the Champs Elysees to the building of the French foreign office on the Quai d'Orsay, which is to be the home of the king and queen during their stay in Paris.

London, July 18 (AP).—With 100 heavy trunks already on the way, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were ready to leave British soil tomorrow on a four-day state visit to France.

Informed quarters said no new political commitments were expected during the royal tour, but the greatest stress was laid upon the "symbolic import" of the handshake between the two countries.

Franco's 'Death Pocket' Breaks; 15,000 Loyalists Flee to Miaja

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, July 18.—More than 15,000 loyalists, snared in a "death pocket" when insurgents bit off the Mora de Rubielos Saliet northwest of Valencia, today smashed a gaping hole in the enemy's lines at Yerica, beyond the town of Montan, and raced against time to reach coastal defenses thrown up at Segorbe and Sagunto by Gen. Jose Miaja for the defense of Valencia.

Inland from the crushed government salient the insurgents drove close to Montan. On the east of the Salient, Franco's troops pushed from Lucena and Zucaina, forcing the loyalists into rearguard fighting to cover their retreat.

Franco, speeding the assault on Valencia, threw all his reserves into the drive along the Teruel-Sagunto highway in an effort to effect a junction with his armies along the seaboard, and open the way for a three-pronged attack on the vital munitions manufacturing port of Sagunto.

Sagunto authorities today published a formal notice the city had been placed under martial law.

Barcelona was raided twice today by seaplanes from Majorca. Fourteen buildings were wrecked, but no casualties resulted.

Barcelona, July 18 (AP).—President Manuel Azana, of government Spain, was confident today that fulfillment of the London plan for withdrawal of foreign volunteers would end the civil war.

Addressing the nation by radio on the second anniversary of the conflict, Azana declared "foreign invasion" (by Italians and Germans) alone kept the war going.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

A passenger steps ashore from the S. S. Iroquois (the Government's first attempt at showing Americans some of their own possessions) and records some conclusions:

It seems strange that Uncle Sam has so long watched thousands of Americans spending their dimes and dollars in Bermuda (which belongs to Britain) to the neglect of such a paradise as St. Thomas—which belongs to Uncle Sam and has as much natural opportunity as Bermuda . . .

To an unofficial eye, at least, the United States Tourist Bureau (which conceived the idea of showing Americans their vacation opportunities under their own flag) had much on the ball. On the surface everyone seemed benefited: The Iroquois, idle for some time, was sent back on the waves. A crew was put to work. A tourist agency (which co-operated with the United States Tourist Bureau) was benefited. And hundreds of merchants in San Juan and St. Thomas (who aren't the most affluent in the world) have profited.

Even the excited-eyed and dark-skinned native boys who swam out or came to the ship in rickety home-made boats to dive for pennies or nickels or quarters in paint blue water, learned that United States people don't have horns and cloven hooves. The pennies or nickels or quarters they brought from below have been spent with merchants operating under the American flag—or with night club owners operating under a tropical moon . . .

We emphasize that the idea of the tour was good because the people in Puerto Rico and St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, were all for it. The preparations for the ship's arrival in San Juan were as elaborate as those put on for a Spanish wedding. The had Miss Puerto Rico (a girl with fair moons in her eyes) as greeter No. 1. They had a band that made you want to rhumba down the gangplank. They had American flags on the business houses and hung the flag along the streetways. And the rum companys—ah!

Why, man, they almost gave the stuff away! They did give away the drinks; and if you even thought of paying, then that deep Spanish something that makes them so hospitable, or so volatile, or such lovers of the moon and the white surf's singing, why that something in them made you feel as though a clumsy foot had with intention trod on the trailing lace of a senorita's evening gown. They simply looked at you a little hurt; and then with a tolerant smile they would offer another rum swizzler.

And with another, and perhaps another, the moving shadows on the tapestry mountains actually drew in until the mountains became a part of the harbor's coloring and the flying fish had the wings and stamina of eagles; you began to love your friend and your enemy alike; pirate galleons came again to the harbor and from far on the hill the popgun cannon cemented to the bastions of La Fortaleza boomed.

Some have said that San Juan isn't ready for the tourist trade. That depends, of course, on what they should make ready. Indeed, there are some slums to be cleared, but resettlement has been extensive. Mrs. Roosevelt saw the island a few years ago and many Puerto Ricans are now in resettlement houses, which are nice. No one, reasonably, would expect the island to be transformed as by magic. From the tourist standpoint, it may not even be desirable. The slums should go, from humanity's viewpoint, but we aren't in favor of making a tropical Hollywood of San Juan, a Hollywood with artificial Spanish architecture, and, in time, artificial rum . . . .

If touched with poverty here and there—and if the taxicab rates haven't been regulated, there is still a naturalness that shouldn't be disturbed. There is hospitality that will offer you half the house, half the rum, that will answer your questions with no impatience and that finally will see you to the pier and regret, in the softest syllables, that the band doesn't play "Aloha" with all the nuances of Hawaii . . .

By all the fates, this sort of thing shouldn't be disturbed. And it becomes difficult to see how some declare that Puerto Rico isn't ready for tourists. Frankly, we are afraid of what the tourists might do to Puerto Rico! Should they deprive the island of its fine manners and hospitality, then something rare will have left this world. But the Puerto Ricans and the merchants of St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, need the tourists and are likely to get them. And needing them and wanting them, they should have them . . .

As far as we know, the United States Tourist Bureau is committed to no policy other than the sensible one of wanting American dollars spent under the flag that minted the dollars. It has the idea that Americans would like Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. The bureau thinks that American ships and American crews would benefit from frequent excursions to the American tropics, and that good, neighborly feeling traditionally goes with the spending of a dollar . . .

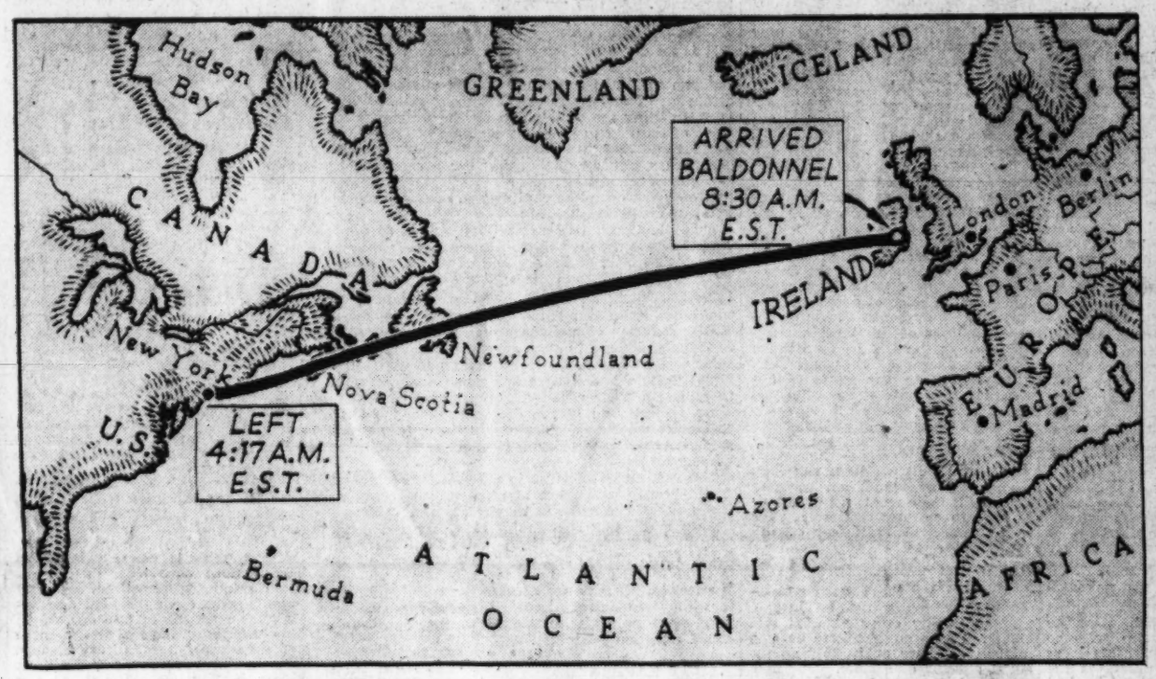
An Aviation Mechanic Makes 'Unscheduled' Flight to Ireland

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

1 FROM THE ALBUM. Douglas Corrigan, today's hero of the air, who spanned the Atlantic in a ship of "ancient" vintage, shown as he appeared as a young eaglet, ready to take off after graduating from a high chair.

2 VIRGINIA BEACH, VA. In 1931, four years after Lindbergh had made a crossing to Paris alone, Corrigan was "barnstorming" at $2 a hop. Miss Helen Fiala was his passenger in this open cockpit plane in which he sought business at the nearby summer resort.

3 UNHERALDED AND ALMOST UNNOTICED, the former aviation mechanic who helped build Linbergh's Spirit of St. Louis, dropped in at Floyd Bennett Airport July 9 after pushing East from California on a 28-hour nonstop flight in his 9-year-old Curtis Robin plane. Interest at the moment was centered on Howard Hughes' expensive flying laboratory in which the millionaire was to depart on a round-the-world record hop the following day. He gassed his ship himself and thanked field attaches who found space for the craft.



4 NOBODY HAD ANY IDEA the quiet-tousle-haired mechanic had planned an ocean flight and not until a few hours before he took off did he mention that he "might fly back to California." He filled an old oil can with drinking water and pocketed a few chocolate bars. Map above shows route he followed on his ocean "hop," the same course taken by Lindbergh, Byrd, Earhart, Post and Hughes. Corrigan's time was 28 hours and 13 minutes in his second-hand plane of the same vintage Lindbergh used. His blind grandmother, Mrs. Jennie Corrigan, 92, shown at left with the aviator's aunt, Mrs. S. Fraser Langford, was overjoyed when told of her grandson's exploit at her home in Los Angeles.

5 GETS WEATHER DATA. He phoned a number of times early Sunday morning and Kenneth Behr, field manager suspecting he was planning to take off on a distance flight—checked with the Weather Bureau who told him the flyer had inquired about weather conditions across the country—not the Atlantic.

6 CASH ON THE LINE. Corrigan, who was always doing things for himself, spent the past week with a wipe-rag in hand going over his ship. He is shown paying Bill Woolsey, service station man for the gas and oil he bought from him late Saturday night. At the same time, although he didn't know it then, Corrigan became an uncle when his sister, Mrs. Stanton McGlish (below) gave birth to a daughter at a Glendale, Calif., hospital.

7 SIGNS RELEASE. His plane already warmed up, the flyer went to the field office where he signed a release before Airport Inspector George Schloor (left) before taking off from Floyd Bennett Field, where everybody thought he was heading for California. A few minutes later the picture at right was made and he gave her the gun, but headed East instead of West to the astonishment of the small group that watched him take off. Less than 29 hours later he dropped in through a sprinkling of rain that was falling on Baldonnel Airport, Dublin, Ireland. Airport attendants rushed out to meet the strange ship . . .

8 "I'M DOUGLAS CORRIGAN, IN FROM NEW YORK," he said to those who gathered about his ship. Asked for his passport, he said, "My compass went wrong, I intended to fly to California."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Is Wife Justified in Disapproving of Husband's Habitually Playing Golf With Woman Business Associate?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am blonde, attractive and in my middle thirties. For the past 15 years I have known a man in my office. It has been purely platonic. We find a mutual interest in golf and I thoroughly enjoy playing with him. But recently his wife has shown by her attitude that she disapproves. Whenever we arrange to play, she makes a point of insisting that he meet her before the game is over. I think she is being downright unfair. Certainly there is nothing more harmless than golf. Besides, I knew him before she did and he enjoys playing with me as much as I enjoy playing with him. Please help me with this problem.

BEWILDERED.

* * * *

DEAR BEWILDERED: I have a hunch that the person supposedly writing this letter didn't write it. The opening sentence sounds more like a man's description of a woman than a woman's description of herself. However, let's consider the problem. Golf may be a harmless game, but the game of golf is not the game under discussion here, when you get right down to brass tacks. The game in question is that of a professional woman's trying to chisel in on a wife's rightful claims to her husband's leisure-time companionship.

* * * *

The persons who are being unfair, in this set-up, are the husband and the "other woman," and, what's worse, they are not content with cheating the wife, but they are trying to rationalize their position as one of injured innocence. If a husband hasn't the native common sense to put an immediate end, at the moment of marriage, to an erstwhile bachelor camaraderie with a professional woman, then the latter should promptly take the initiative in revising their relationship and bringing it up to date.

* * * *

It is woman's business to be the pace-setter in social relationships between the sexes; and when a woman follows a married man's cue in a pattern of behavior calculated to distress or humiliate his wife, she is placing her motives and her principles under question. No woman in her middle thirties, with brains enough to hold a professional position, is so ingenuous and naive as to suppose a man's marriage to another woman need not affect his erstwhile comradely relations with her. She knows quite well that if she no more than acquiesces in a continuance of their friendship on its former basis, she is definitely encouraging him in conduct that is inimical to the success of his marriage.

* * * *

A woman who would put her selfish enjoyment of a certain man's golfing abilities ahead of that man's marital happiness; who would be a party to conduct calculated to provoke his wife (and, for that matter, almost any wife) to jealous concern and nagging interference; and who would thereafter concur with him in blaming the wife for being anxiously watchful, is a woman who is a traitor to her sex, and a traitor to the highest claims of friendship, and a traitor to the rules of really clean sportsmanship. By which I mean to say—as I hope you gather by now—that this particular game of golf isn't worth the candle, so far as the man and his wife are concerned. And the other woman ought to be ashamed of herself, for being such an obstinate, self-exculpating trouble maker.

M. H.

Daring Designs Give Bathroom Individual Look

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

If the bathroom's in for a real doing-over, give more than a passing thought to the idea of linoleum for the walls. Partly because it is so practical. Easy to clean with a damp cloth and besides all corners and baseboards are rounded. But mainly because it really offers an opportunity for something new under the shower. You can have as much gayety and design as with wallpaper, and yet be as waterproof as your kitchen floor. Which is something. If you want plain and simple color, there it is in a range of interesting tones. If you want riotous individual design, you can have it inlaid right into the walls and to your own fancy. Fish or flowers, umbrellas or coral stalks, sailing boats or transatlantic steamers—as you like it. Or simple scallops or line borders if you're dignified in your desires. Or monograms on wall and floor.

Whatever you decide on for your linoleum wall motif, repeat the motif in your bath linens. Monograms are usually initials but they don't have to be. If you're a fishy family, let your hobby mark your linens with interesting varieties of fish embroidered on your towels. Ships, coral stalks, flowers or what-have-you will do quite as well. Some people have golf sticks or tennis rackets, horses, dogs, cats or birds. It's up to you. Here is one room in the house that's not restricted by tradition.

Figure Need Not Become Middle-Aged if You Are Not Lazy.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE MAIN difference between the figure at 20 and at 40 is apt to be in the midsection. Your waistline may have expanded 6 inches from what it was when you were young and supple—in fact, 6 inches is a conservative increase.

And what about that nice straight front line you had at 20? You probably let those firm, well-toned muscles become lax and soft so that they are incapable of holding your figure to streamlines. Then when fat collects in this area, you have all the requisites of a middle-aged spread.

But your figure need never grow middle aged! This unhappy change is caused by the failure to exercise rather than by age itself, and if you don't believe it, just look at the figures of some of the movie stars. Many of them are lovelier now than they were several years ago, and the explanation is that they have taken exercise seriously.

Strengthen Abdominal Muscles.

One of the first things you must do to keep a young figure is to adopt exercises that will strengthen the powerful bands of muscles forming the abdominal wall. For general exercise you can rely on sports, walking, or your daily work, but these activities are not specific enough for the abdominal muscles.

If you are short and stocky you also need daily waistline exercises. Turn on the radio and twist, bend and stretch in all directions until you can feel your waistline getting slimmer. There is little danger of strain with these exercises and they may be as vigorous as you please, but the abdominal exercises should be progressive, beginning with easy movements and working into those that are strongly contractile. Here is an excellent beginning exercise for the abdominal muscles:

MOVEMENT: Flatten the lower back against the wall by contracting the abdominal muscles and the gluteal muscles of the buttocks. Hold, release and repeat ten times. In this position the lumbar curve is straightened and the pelvis is tilted correctly, with the trunk at a right angle to the thigh.

Making It Harder.

To increase the difficulty of the exercise, sit away from the wall with knees flexed so that the soles of the feet are flat on the floor. Contract and relax the gluteal muscles, always lifting upward with the lower abdominal wall.

REDUCER'S MAYONNAISE.

2 egg yolks
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1½ cups mineral oil

All the salt to the egg yolk, blend thoroughly. Add the lemon juice. Then add the oil in quantities of a tablespoon or more, being sure that all the oil has completely combined with the egg yolks before more is added. Continue beating all the time with rotary beater. Toward the last larger quantities of the oil may be added at a time. Be all ingredients cold. If a more acid dressing is desired, add more lemon juice or add the juices from several pickles.

Use purified mineral oil—heavy oil is best. This oil has no nutritive value and is also laxative.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 19.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S first visit to our pokey little crossroads has been amazingly peaceful—no riots on the streets, no mob scenes, no violence of any kind. She has been very smartly handled by her film bosses, and she and her parents have managed to get in a lot of sightseeing with no annoyance.

ALICE HUGHES.

Even the cameramen have been docile, though one did fire a flash bulb at her in the International Casino, that colossus of night clubs. Her papa was ripsnorting sore, but the picture wasn't used, anyway. There was a bottle on the table! Shirley's peace and comfort have been aided by the fact that her personal escort has been no less a personage than Detective Johnny Broderick, probably the most famous fly cop on the force, whose particular beat is the sinful Broadway sector and its odd people. Johnny is a very strong and stern character, and few people are brazen enough to mingle with him save in the friendliest way.

The film people thumbed down on individual interviews with the small star, preferring to turn loose the press en masse. And Shirley can cope with reporters alone or in mobs, make no mistake about that. She is astoundingly tactful, and always says the right thing. When the lady reporter asked her if the President liked her, her reply was perfect. "I don't know," replied Miss Temple. "I liked him!" Could an ambassador do better than that?

* * * *

The whole Temple visit has been beautifully handled, and what might have been an epic of goo has turned out to be an episode of good times, pleasant meetings, excellent taste. Nice to be able to say hooray for everyone!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—If you were here this week (or are you?) you would notice large numbers of excellently dressed, stony-eyed ladies in and about the shops and wholesale houses. They are "the buyers" and this is their time to drop in and do the fall purchasing. The stony look is just part of their technique. If they looked enthusiastic, it might break down their "buying resistance," and they would find themselves "overbought," as the trade lingo has it. Thus it is that I think they practice forbidding looks before their hotel mirrors.

A very handsome figure was noted at our police headquarters the other day—watching the malefactors pass before the assembled detectives in the daily "line-up." The caller was the former Ruth Bryan Owen and her present husband, Capt. Rohde. "Very interesting," was the comment.

Fuller Blouses To Slenderize Styles This Fall

GOOD NEWS for those who want slender appearing hips is the importance of the bloused effect in the fall silhouette. Late summer clothes are showing an increasing tendency to blouse above the waistline and by fall the very full blouse will be generally in evidence. Not only has the separate blouse become more "blousy," especially in the back, but dresses and even coats are going in for bloused backs.

Whereas, last season the silhouette was tightly fitted above the waist, it is now showing an easy look over the bust and through the yoke with varying degrees of fullness just above the waistline. This is a style that takes inches off the hips and also makes the waistline look smaller.

With the bloused top the straight or tuber-tube-like skirt increases the effect of slenderness. This style also gives opportunity for the wider use of belts, a youthful style.

Even the fitted and princess silhouettes show a drapier, roomier, softer fit from shoulders to waistline than they did last season. They have lost their skimpy effect and also seemed to have dropped their waistlines a trifle.

In tailored dresses and coats a slight bloused effect often is obtained by an inside tape that can be raised or lowered to suit the figure. Separate blouses frequently are bloused on rubber bands thus eliminating bunchiness under the skirt. Some of the new separate blouses also are showing a tendency toward peplums especially in their dressier versions.

Nacre Beige New Shade For Evening Dresses

Paris (U.P.).—Aileen Rice, who fairly much sticks to sport knits and believes that evening gowns should be sewed and not knit, is exploiting a new shade called Nacre beige. The off-white shade is not only effective with black or navy blue but adds the proper note of contrast to any dark shade, including the many new tones of deep rich red. The Nacre beige is used for a linen knit jacket, loose and below the hips, with a small round collar and a crepe de chine lining.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay,

Current Events Class.

"Say, listen to this: 'STOCKS GO DOWN.' What'd I tell you?"

"Is that so? You know, I'm so thrilled about finding this hat so cheap. Nobody'd ever think it was less than $10——"

"Yes, don't you know I told you the day before yesterday this was a gamblers' market? Don't you remember?"

"Oh, yes, that's right. You know there's one thing about buying a good hat this late—you can wear it next summer——"

"I tell you one thing—I've never guessed wrong on this stock market yet. You know, I told you as long as the bears didn't go in——"

"Say, would you take off this ribbon and put a velvet band instead?"

"What? Oh I don't know. Either would be all right. Say, listen to this will you? 'CHINESE LINES HOLD.' What'd I tell you?"

"You know, this ribbon looks a little cheap. And velvet wouldn't be so summery——"

"Now what Chiang Kai-shek is trying to do is to draw the Japanese down into China. That's what the German generals told him to do—say, where are you?"

* * * *

"No, I'll wait till you come back."

"All right, what about Hitler?"

"I didn't say anything about Hitler! I said the German generals advised the Chinese to retreat."

"Oh—I see. Say, do you think this hat looks better straight—like this? Or tilted—like this?"

"Oh—I don't know. It looks very nice the way it is. Now here's the way of it—the Chinese figure if they can exhaust Japan, then Russia'll come in—say, you're not listening to a word I say."

"Why, I am, too."

"All right. What was I saying?"

"You said the Germans would come in and help China."

"NO! I said the Russians! Now get this straight. Are you listening?"

"Yes, but tell me just one thing first. Would this brim look better if it dipped a little more at the side?"

"I told you it was a very nice hat. Now, the thing is this—Russia doesn't want to move until she sees what Germany's going to do."

"Oh, I se-e-e. Say, wait just a minute. I want to try this dip in the other mirror . . . All right, go on."

* * * *

"Where was I? You've got me so mixed up——"

"You started to tell what Hitler was going to do."

"No, I want to hear all about it—just as soon as I get the scissors . . . Now then, please go on."

"Well now, it says here that Chamberlain is turning on Hitler. What did I tell you?"

"You know, I believe it looks better without the bow!"

"Now if Chamberlain could just be sure of what Roosevelt was going to do—say, are you listening?"

"Yes, yes, I'm listening. What IS Roosevelt going to do?"

"Good heavens! Say, I'm going to wait until you get THROUGH with that hat."

"I'm through. I'm just going to hold it here in my lap. Go ahead."

"I'd like to read you a piece here—if I can find it. It's an exceedingly able article—it says what I've been telling you all along. Are you ready?"

"Yes, go on."

"All right then. 'Developments today in Europe'——"

"Say, wait! Let me ask just one question first. What would you really guess this hat cost?"

Fashion Oddities.

Paris (U.P.).—Oddities in the day's fashion news include the pouch purse which Heim sews to the side of a brief cotton coat; the quilted silk poplin belt which Maggy Rouff puts on a sports dress of the same material; the initials which Robert Piguet appliques on so many of his sports and morning dresses, and the stylized map of the world which forms the print on a Molyneux evening dress.

Vitamin B, Main Diet Need of Adults, As Middle-Aged Appetite Slackens

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The vitamin the adult needs is B. According to formal classifications there are two B's, but probably the adult needs both of them.

Vitamin B is being used to augment the diet in liver deficiency, in anemia, in gout, in arthritis, in some forms of heart trouble, for lack of stomach secretions, in neuritis and in loss of tone of the bowel.

It will be noticed that all of these conditions belong to what might be called the degenerative changes of middle age.

When one asks why there should be a Vitamin B deficiency in middle age, the answers are several. In the first place, the chief source of Vitamin B in the food is in yeast, whole wheat bread, cereals, liver and kidney—the concentration of the vitamin being in the order named. Now it is a matter of ordinary observation that in middle age people tend to give up eating cereal and bread and many dislike liver and kidneys so much they never eat them. So it is quite possible there is a normal dietary deficiency of the vitamins. Then stomach disorders will cut down the appetite, and in middle age the liver function falls off and as a consequence, the vitamin is not absorbed or utilized in the body.

A specific example of this lack of utilization of the vitamins is seen in drunkrads, who may develop alcoholic neuritis, simply because they eat little and have an impared digestion. If Vitamin B concentrate is given them, even though they continue their alcoholic habits, the neuritis clears up.

Coed's Harsh 'Expose' Has Society Buzzing

Student's Thesis Scores 'The Girl Who Participates to Fullest Extent in 3 Institutions: Finishing School, Debut and Junior League.'

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Who on earth would have thought it? A thesis for a master's degree out at the University of Chicago is causing quite a ripple in Washington society. Yesterday, no less than four dowagers—all of whom refused to be quoted—told me over the telephone that the young woman who went to society for source material and then expounded her discoveries in a paper that shows topflight circles in a highly unfavorable light was either misinformed or eager to build up "class hatred."

At a small luncheon yesterday, points of the expose made up most of the table talk—one of the guests having brought with her a clipping that tells the story. A student at the University of Chicago, Miss Mary Elaine Ogden, of Waterbury Conn., it seems, has just won her master's degree for her thesis entitled "The Social Orientation of the Society Girl." Among points emphasized in the study is that "The society girl is a person who participates to the fullest extent in three institutions: the finishing school, the debut and the Junior League." Pretty hard hitting, that. But the doughty Miss Ogden had only begun when she wrote that in the introduction.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Pitching in with verbal boxing gloves later in her thesis, Miss Ogden pounds away in harsher terms. She avers that "the typical society girl is inclined to be an egoist," and she points out that "snobbery is due chiefly to the society girl's educational background." This she continues, usually is limited to "a backward finishing school in which there is overemphasis on popularity with men, on the girl's own importance, on the development of class consciousness, and on social accomplishments.

Miss Ogden judges from her discoveries that "the implicit purpose of the debut is to make a good marriage," and she regards the debut year as nothing more or less than 12 months of romantic escape from mundane happenings, with a big wedding as the ultimate goal of the whirl. She charges the Junior League with basing its membership too much on social stature and with doing its welfare work "as much out of the class sense of noblesse oblige as out of genuine sympathy for the underprivileged," and she sees the society girl's entire existence as being too far removed from the world as it really is.

Well, stimulating as are some of Miss Ogden's statements, she could run into no end of argument in Washington—even now, when most social notables are vacationing elsewhere. As one wise woman pointed out at the luncheon yesterday, "Miss Ogden has confused real society with what sometimes passes for it. And she might do well to look a little further into the scope of the Junior League. If she would study the welfare set-up in any city, she would find the league is a real help and that it stresses its social connections far less than its ability to serve the needy."

"Evidently, Miss Ogden didn't do any research around Washington," someone else added. "If she had, she might have discovered that more than half the debutantes in the past decade have been students at top-flight Eastern colleges, and that nearly all complete their course after they have made their bow to society. Rare, indeed, these days is the deb who finishes her education with a finishing school."

* * * *

Miss Ogden wasn't the only one who hurled a verbal bombshell at society over the week-end. Sally Clark, sister-in-law of John Roosevelt, said in an interview Saturday, "The people you meet in the theatrical world are so much more interesting than those you meet in society."

Her statement was in connection with her singing engagement that starts Thursday at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York, and that has her so excited she "can't sleep." Some of us who observed her cool, detached manner at the wedding of her sister, Anne Lindsay Clark, and John Roosevelt last month, can hardly imagine her being excited over anything. Poised as a princess at a court ball, she acted as if being a maid of honor was all in a day's work. But her immobile face got far less attention than her two-toned coiffure, cut Dutch-boy style and set off with two blondined strips on either side.

Rumors are going the rounds in New York's night club circles that if 18-year-old Miss Clark goes over with her singing engagement, Hollywood will be angling for her services. And if she goes to the film city and retains that blonde-brown coiffure, chances are she will set a new hair style. One thing is sure, there's nothing like her coiffure in Hollywood now.

Recent Visitors to Seaside Resort

Atlantic Studios.

COL. PHILIP TORREY, U. S. M. C., of Washington and Newport, R. I., and his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Torrey, were seen a few days ago on the beach at Cape May, N. J., where the Torrey family went for a brief vacation. Col. Torrey recently was assigned to the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

General Marshall Is Guest at Home Of Colonel Walton

Gen. George Marshall, who recently came to Washington to serve as assistant chief of staff, is the guest of Col. and Mrs. Walton Walker at their apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue. He will remain with them until Mrs. Marshall and their daughter, who are now at Fire Island, N. Y., join him in September.

Mrs. Walker and her young son will leave today to visit her parents, who have a summer cottage near Ottawa, Canada.

Cummings Return From Paris and Geneva Sojourns

Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, former Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, has returned to Washington with Mrs. Cumming after a stay of several months in Europe. They arrived in New York Saturday on the liner President Roosevelt.

Dr. Cumming attended a meeting of the Committee of the National Health Office in Paris April 9 and a meeting of the League of Nations Health Office in Geneva June 30. The principal discussion centered about the control of yellow fever, which is still prevalent in the interior of South America and in equatorial Africa.

Trip Postponed By Cummings

The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, who had planned to spend part of their vacation in California, have postponed that trip indefinitely. Instead, following their visit in Cleveland, where the Attorney General will speak before the American Bar Association, they will go on to Chicago and thence to Wisconsin to visit friends.

Just how long they will stay in Chicago or in Wisconsin, they have not yet decided, but probably they, like most other Washington residents, will be back in the city by Labor Day at the latest.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Conard will leave next week for Asheville, N. C., where they will spend a short time at their home, Highlands, in nearby mountains. They will be joined there by their daughter, Mrs. Theodore Haff, wife of Commander Haff, who is stationed at Charleston, W. Va. Later, Admiral Conard will make inspection tours of the navy yards at Norfolk, Va., and Charleston, S. C.

According to present plans, Admiral and Mrs. Conard will return to Washington early in September.

John L. Herbert Engaged to Wed Virginia Dorsey

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Robert Dorsey announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia Worthington Dorsey, to John Lawrence Herbert, of this city. The bride-elect is a granddaughter of the late Dr. Nathaniel Chapman, of Maryland, and of the late Worthington Dorsey.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of John Thomas Herbert, of Groton, Conn. The wedding will take place in the next few weeks.

Miss McComas Is Wed at Reno

A wedding of interest to Washington took place at Reno, Nev., July 14 when Miss Beatrice McComas, of this city, was married to George F. Hamilton, of Reno, The ceremony was performed at the home of the Mrs. Della Woodruff, with the Rev. Brewster Adams, officiating.

Mrs. Hamilton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. McComas, of Glen, W. Va., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hamilton, of Silver Spring, Md.

Given in marriage by Al Jolson, the bride wore a white gown of summer sheer, fashioned on simple lines. Her corsage was of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Jean McGowan, the bridesmaid, wore a frock of yellow chiffon and a corsage of talisman roses.

Leonard Powell was best man. About 40 guests witnessed the wedding and attended the reception that followed. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton will make their home at Reno, where the bridegroom now is employed. He was associated with a Washington firm for more than 15 years.

Miss Millward Is Bridesmaid

When Miss Agnes Rose, of Cornwall-on-Hudson becomes the bride of Lieut. Glenn Anderson, jr., this afternoon at the West Point Chapel, Miss Edna Millward, of Washington, will be in the wedding party. Miss Millward and the bride-elect were schoolmates at the Cornwall-on-Hudson school.

Other bridesmaids will be Miss Alice Day, of Englewood, N. J., and Miss Evelyn Anderson, sister of the bridegroom. There will be 12 ushers, all turned out in full military uniform.

After their marriage, Lieut. Anderson and his wife will leave on a wedding trip to New England. Later they will go to Randolph Field, San Antonio, Tex., where Lieut. Anderson is stationed.

Canada Envoy And Wife Back In Washington

Marlers Return From Brief Visit to Resort at White Sulphur.

Sir Herbert Marler, the Canadian Minister, and Lady Marler, who have been on a brief visit to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., returned to Washington yesterday.

A farewell dinner for them was given Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Waters Taft, of New York, who entertained in the Terrace room of the Greenbrier Hotel. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Stuart McVeigh, of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Lester Grant, of London; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Payne, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. George W. Norvell, of Huntington, W. Va.; Mrs. George W. Crawford and Mrs. Robert N. Warmack, of New York; Mrs. Thomas P. Bryan, of Richmond, and Mrs. James E. Davidson, of Bay City, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, who are members of the cottage colony at the resort, entertained for the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler at Kate's Mountain Lodge Friday evening.

The opening of the Old White Arts Colony and School on Friday and the start of the annual West Virginia State Open Tennis championships yesterday at the Gold and Tennis Club are giving the impetus for new lines of activities at The Greenbrier this week. Washington residents who will take part in the tennis events include Lieut. and Mrs. Stanley K. Robinson; Miss Sara Moore, Miss Edith Clark, and Barney Welsh. The latter two will defend titles won at the resort last year.

Among visitors who spent the week-end at the West Virginia resort were John W. Guider, Charles A. Thomas, A. L. Lynn, of Washington, and Reitetsu Iwata of the Japanese Embassy here. Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffeler and their children are spending several days at the resort.

Girl Scout Head Back From Tour

Ocean travelers landing in New York yesterday included Mrs. Frederick Brooke, of Washington, president of the Girl Scouts of America, who arrived on the Queen Mary, and V. A. L. Mallet, Counselor of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Mallet.

On the steamship Santa Clara from South America came Mrs. Laurence A. Steinhardt and her daughter, Miss Dulcie Ann Steinhardt, wife and daughter of the United States Ambassador to Peru. They joined Ambassador Steinhardt at the Savoy-Plaza, where he has been for some time. He returned to this country from his Peruvian post early last month and has divided his time between New York and Washington in recent weeks.

At many functions arranged in honor of the crown prince and crown princess of Sweden, the Ambassador was present. Prior to his appointment to Peru he was United States Minister to Sweden, and he is a close friend of Prince Gustav Adolf and his wife.

According to present plans, Mr. and Mrs. Steinhardt and their daughter will sail this week for a vacation in England. Mrs. Steinhardt and her daughter will remain abroad for the remainder of the season, but chances are the Ambassador will return sooner for conferences at the State Department in connection with the Peruvian-Ecuadorian Boundary Commission.

Kathleen Campbell, N.Y. Man, Engaged

To Wed E. J. Loughman, Jr., of Long Island.

The engagement of Miss Kathleen Marie Campbell, daughter of Mrs. John J. Campbell, of Cedarhurst, Long Island, to Edward Joseph Loughman, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Loughman, of Lawrence, Long Island, has been announced by her mother.

Miss Campbell was graduated from Trinity College, in Washington, and Mr. Loughman is an alumnus of La Salle Military Academy and Fordham University.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE RANKS of those who have been lingering here and saying bravely, "We-LIKE Washington in the summer" are becoming thinner daily. Informal life here these months is very pleasant to people who have been attending huge parties and official dinners throughout the winter, but just the same the Capital heat does begin to get them down.

DUDLEY HARMON

The latest to make definite plans for departure are Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver. They will leave about the first of August for a leisurely motor trip North, stopping to visit various friends on the way. Their final destination is York Harbor, Me., where Mrs. Pulver's mother, Mrs. Alex Legare, has a home. The Pulvers will spend the coming week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, who moved a few days ago to their cottage at Rehoboth Beach.

* * * *

MRS. HIGGINSON ROGERS plans to sail for Bermuda in a day or two. Summer used to be considered the off season for this island, but lately more and more people are going during the hot months, and some find it so attractive that they live there most of the year . . . Ralph Snowden Hill is spending the entire week as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ballard Moore at Hot Springs, Va. Miss Kathleen Knox has joined Mrs. McCook Knox at York Harbor after visiting her cousins, Justice and Mrs. Phillip McCook, of New York, at their summer home near New London, Conn. . . . Miss Dolly Corbin expects to leave Friday to spend the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Turnure on Long Island . . . Mrs. Francis Whitten has returned from a stay in the South and is at her home on Thompson Circle . . . The George Grant Masons, who are staying at the Shoreham, are house hunting. Mr. Mason was recently appointed to the Civil Aeronautics Administration, and both are expected to be additions to Capital society.

Miss Eleanor Meem changed her mind at the last minute and did not accompany Miss Evalyn Washington McLean when the latter left last night by train for Colorado Springs. Miss Meem will remain here until her parents depart to visit their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, jr., and will go with them. Miss McLean will also be the guest of her brother and his wife on her arrival in Colorado Springs, where they reside.

* * * *

Most brides of several months are engaged in struggling with the intricacies of learning to run a house, but Mrs. Willard Reed, jr., the former Mary Cowles, spends most of her time up in the sky. Her husband being an airlines official, Mary decided early this summer that she would accompany him in his almost-daily trips around the country by plane. One day she will lunch with some of her many friends in Washington; the next she will meet somebody in Los Angeles for tea, and the following evening might find her in Memphis or New York. Her headquarters is officially Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed are considering going to Newport this week-end for the dance to be held by Mr. and Mrs. Francis Taylor for the latter's daughter, Fernanda de Mohrenschildt. Mrs. Taylor was at one time the wife of Dr. Edward S. Cowles, father of Mary Reed, from whom she later was divorced.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, of Washington, will give a large dinner at their Newport villa before the Taylor dance. The debutante will be the guest of honor at one to be held by Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Guthrie Nicholson at The Glen, their residence. Before her recent marriage Mrs. Nicholson was Mrs. Moses Taylor, and is the mother of Francis Taylor.

Others who will give dinners before the Taylor dance are Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel P. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Young, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt and Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Wheeler.

Philips-Bryant Nuptials Today

Only members of the two families and close friends will attend the wedding reception this evening of Miss Grace Edith Bryant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Keller Bryant, and Roland Zeri Philips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Philips. The parents of the young couple reside in Takoma Park.

The Emory Methodist Church in Brightwood will be the scene of the ceremony at 6 o'clock, the Rev. Horace E. Cromer officiating.

Mrs. Ruth Wahlstrom, sister of the bride-to-be, will serve as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Miss Adelaide Z. Philips, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Sumner Burhoe. Dr. Burhoe will act as best man, and the ushers are Irving G. Beckwith, J. Alston Fisher, Howard Parsons and Prof. Chester Adams, of Bristol, Tenn.

After a wedding trip, the couple will make their home at 203 Holly avenue, Takoma Park. The prospective bride attended Blackstone Junior College and Emory and Henry College, and her fiance studied at the Alabama State Secondary Agriculture College.

Kasehagens Back From Visits to 3 Cities in Virginia

Mrs. Leo W. Kasehagen, of Washington, and her son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Kasehagen 3d, of Pittsburgh, have returned here after visiting Williamsburg, Jamestown and Yorktown, Va.

Dr. Kasehagen, who is connected with the Carnegie Institute of Technology, and his wife will spend several weeks here as guests of his parents.

Mrs. Wadsworth Here.

Mrs. Reverdy Wadsworth, of Chicago, the former Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, has arrived in Washington to be at the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, who is recovering from an operation for appendicitis.

Sylvan Theater Fete Tonight

Prominent civic and social leaders have been invited to attend the fifth summer festival of the season this evening at 8 o'clock at the National Sylvan Theater in the Washington Monument Grounds. The Marian Chace Dancers will appear in a specially arranged sequence which will be preceded by a half-hour symphonic program given by the Washington Civic Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Kurt Hetzel.

Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Lewis R. Barrett, Robert L. Haycock, Jere J. Crane, Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, Dr. Chester W. Holmes and William McWueeney are some of the prominent persons to which invitations have been issued by Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, chairman of the summer festival committee.

Kent Dyer will announce the program. Members of the committee will be assisted by a group of girls from the Y. W. C. A. Camp Stay at Home, under the direction of Miss Mabel Cook. Boy Scouts will usher.

As is the custom, chair privilege tickets are available in advance at the Willard, the Hotel Washington and the AAA ticket bureau. They will also be on sale as early as 7 o'clock at the Sylvan Theater.

Mordecai Ezekiels To Visit Canada

To Travel by Canoe in the Lake Country.

Dr. and Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel will leave shortly for a vacation in Canada. They will travel by canoe through a section of the Canadian lake country and will return by way of Montreal and the New England States.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Ezekiel are enthusiastic campers and one season made a walking trip through New Hampshire.

Dr. Ezekiel is economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Zonta Clubs Hold Annual Joint Rally

Convention Report, Skits, Music Program Follow the Banquet.

Zontians of the District, Annapolis, Frederick and Hagerstown joined in their annual intercity dinner last night at the Brooke Farm Tea House with members of the local club as hostesses. Miss Mary Sigman was chairman of arrangements for the affair and Miss Emma T. Hahm, president of the Washington club, presided during the informal program to which all of the clubs contributed.

One of the features of the entertainment was the singing of the new Zonta song, by the author of the words, Mrs. Louise Stambaugh, who was awarded first prize in a contest conducted by Zonta International.

Miss Hahm, who has just returned from the recent convention in Banff Springs, Canada, where announcement of the prize was made, described the sessions there and the remainder of the evening was given over to music and skits presented by members of the local group and the visitors.

Annapolis Sends Large Delegation

Among the Zontians from other places who attended were Miss Amy Ogle, president of the Annapolis Club and a delegation of 12 of the 17 members of the club including: Mrs. Lillian Musterman, past president; Mrs. Gordon Fleet, vice president; Miss Lucy Wheatley, Miss Malvina Dove, Miss Nellie Riordan, Miss Catherine Linthicum, Mrs. Jane Fowler, Miss Elvira Fagan, Mrs. Cecil Smith and Dr. Frances Weitzman.

From Frederick there were Miss Nora Wise, president; Miss Hal Ott and her sister, Miss Mary Ott; Mrs. Nan Pue, Mrs. Estelle Fellows, Miss Helen Smith, Mrs. Bertha Culler, Miss Florence Garner, Miss Margaret Berthold and Mrs. Alice Sharpe.

Miss Electa Ziegler, a past president of the Hagerston club, and Mrs. Emma Patterson, were in attendance from there.

Washingtonians Have Many Guests

Many of the local club members had guests. With Miss Hahm were Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart and Mrs. Stewart's mother, Mrs. Rounds; with Miss Elizabeth Beresford, her sister, Miss Kate Beresford; with Dr. Mildred Dickerson Callip, her husband, Carlton Callip; with Miss Anna Muddiman, her sister, Miss Cornelia Muddiman, and with Mrs. Nan Street, her son, John Street.

Mrs. Frances Gutelius Smith was accompanied by her father, Mr. Gutelius; Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, vice president of the club, by her daughter, Miss Eleanor Cox, well-known young artist; Mrs. Marion Hines Taylor by her husband, Alfred Taylor, and her mother, Mrs. Lucy Hines; Miss Mabel Strider by Miss Esther Lohr; Miss Sigman by Miss Ida Larson; Miss Elizabeth Haney and Miss Alice Terrell by Mrs. Margaret Haney, Miss Mary Terrell and Miss Helen Boss, and Dr. Frances Marshall by Mrs. S. P. Fleming, of New York.

Other guests were Dr. Eloise Cram, Dr. Elizabeth Verder and Dr. Margaret Scannell. Other local members of the club included: Mrs. Lillian Cox Athey, Miss Winifred Burwell, Miss Miriam Birdseye, Dr. Edith Seville Coale, Frances Powell Hill, Miss Ann Harding, Miss Vera Lundquist, Miss Clara McGrath, Dr. Marguerite Morris, Mrs. Josephine Prescott, Miss Ruth Sheldon, Mrs. Edith Salisbury, Mrs. Florence Sindell and Mrs. Alice Fay.

Sorority Official Here as Guest

Miss Clementine Newman, of the national council of Kappa Delta sorority, is the guest of Miss Elizabeth Pegram at the Kappa Delta House, 1756 K street northwest, this week. Miss Newman, who is the editor of the sorority quarterly magazine, the Angelos, is returning to her home in Madison, Fla., from the University of Nebraska, where she is social director of Raymond Hall, one of the large new women's dormitories.

Miss Pegram, associate editor of the Kappa Delta magazine, entertained for her at dinner Saturday. Other guests were Miss Kitty Chiswell, Mrs. Percival Hall, jr., a former editor of the Angelos, and Miss Adele Stephenson, Ivor, Va., who is a national inspector of college chapters for Kappa Delta, and also a guest of Miss Pegram.

Yesterday Miss Newman was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the home of Dr. Susan Harmon at University Park. Other guests were Miss Stephenson and Miss Alma Preinkert, registrar at the University of Maryland.

Sunday Mrs. Percival Hall, jr., also entertained at tea in her honor, assisted by Mrs. John N. Ross. Guests were Dr. Harmon and her sister, Miss Ethel Harmon; Miss Sylvia Meyer; Mrs. John Shanklin, a staff artist for the magazine; Miss Pegram, Miss Stephenson, Miss Chiswell; Mrs. Henry Churchwell, of Falls Church, and Miss Catherine Ford, a former president of the local Kappa Delta alumnae association here.

Miss Newman attended July 2-10 the national council meeting of the six national officers of Kappa Delta, at Mackinac Island, Mich. Plans were made for the sorority's convention at Yellowstone next June. Last year the sorority held its fortieth anniversary convention at Richmond, with Miss Stephenson as convention marshal, assisted by Miss Pegram.

Wet Paint No Bar To A.A.U.W. Tea

Clubhouse Still in Process of Redecoration as the Group Meets.

"Wet Paint" greeted members of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women yesterday afternoon as they entered the clubhouse for the first of the Monday teas held this month. The clubhouse is still in the process of redecoration, and strips of heavy paper carpeted the halls, "paint" signs guarded the woodwork and ladders gave evidence that workmen were about.

The club members and their guests were in no way inconvenienced by the fact that all the rooms were not settled. The lounge, where tea was served, was ready for the party and the room adjoining served temporarily as the reading room. The offices of the local branch are for the present established in the room at the front of the clubhouse, which is the regular location of the reading room, until remodeling is finished.

Mrs. L. M. Fuller was acting chairman of the hostess committee and had assisting her Mrs. Willed Crane, Mrs. Willard Garner, Miss Marjorie Grimstead, Miss Barbara Moulton and Miss Anna Scharinger.

Among those present were Mrs. Lawrence Radford, chairman of membership; Miss Sarah Grogan, who had as her guests Mrs. W. M. Gregory, of Savannah, Ga.; and Mrs. Pearlie Taylor, of New York; Mrs. Noble Boaz, who recently returned from the convention of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority in Quebec, and had as her guests three of her sorority sisters who are on their way to their homes in Texas after attending the conclave. They were the Misses Martha Bevil, Harriet Hardner and Eunice Lewis.

Others attending were Mrs. Thomas Heitz, Dr. Edith Allen, Miss Zoda Greenlee, Miss Elizabeth Kilgore, Miss Jacqueline Pringle, Miss Frieda Junck, Mrs. Frank Edgington, Mrs. Colin Whittaker, Miss Erma Brown, Miss Louise Newell, Miss Laura Silsby, Mrs. F. C. Brown, a former member who is here from Chicago on a visit; Miss Floy Wallis and Miss Laura Pollock.

Leaders Picked By Moose Unit

The homemaking committee of Columbia Chaper, Women of the Moose at its meeting last evening at the home of chairman Mrs. Mae Sine, elected Mrs. Edith Furneyhough as assistant to the chairman and Mrs. James P. Mitchell as secretary-treasurer.

The first project of the season will be a doll dressing contest. This was proposed informally by the chairman a short time ago, and the members were so interested that five dolls were turned over to her last evening. Dolls will be entered by members of the chapter and at the first meeting in August, they will be displayed, judged and a prize awarded for the best dressed. They will then be entered in a national doll dressing contest to be held by the Women of the Moose at Pittsburgh, Pa., the last week in August when the Pilgrim Governor's Conference will be held there for installation of the new national officers of the organization. The dolls afterward will be sent to Mooseheart, national home for the orphaned children maintained by the Moose Fraternity near Chicago, and will be given to the girls there at Christmas.

The local chapter, for some years, has sponsored a cottage at Mooseheart. Last season three hand-made quilts were completed and sent to this cottage, and this year the homemaking committee plans to complete a sufficient number of quilts, with assistance of other committees of the chapter, to have one on each bed at "Dixie Hall."

Madame Chairman

SHERWOOD HIGH SCHOOL at Sandy Spring not only will be the scene of the annual supper given by the Woman's Board of the Montgomery County Hospital next Tuesday night, but also of several other annual suppers which always draw large crowds.

August 11, St. John's Episcopal Church of Olney will have its supper there and August 17, the Ladies' Aid Society of Ashton M. E. Church will have its yearly "chicken and ham supper." The food is so good at all of these affairs as to make the name Sandy Spring almost synonymous with chicken and Maryland beaten biscuits to say nothing of home-cured ham.

The suppers out in Montgomery County draw not only from the immediate vicinity but have a large patronage from District residents who enjoy driving a few miles to participate in a real country outing.

Thursday of this week, Liberty Grove Ladies' Aid Society, chicken dinner at the church; Colesville Ladies' Aid, chicken and ham supper at the W. C. T. U. hall and Potomac Band picnic at Potomac School; July 26, Montgomery County Hospital benefit, Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring; July 27, Four Corners Citizens Association, benefit lawn fete at Four Corners; July 28, Dickerson Methodist Church picnic at Monocacy Park; July 30, Mount Tabor Methodist Ladies' Aid Society, Etchison, annual fried chicken and ham supper.

Next month there will be the St. John's supper and the Ashton supper, both at Sherwood School, and the Wesley Grove Ladies Aid Society annual chicken and ham supper, at Woodfield Hall, August 20.

MEMBERS of the Zonta Club, who always have a better time when they are entertained at Bonnie Brae, the home of their president, Emma T. Hahn, than at any place else they can think of, came from the last party with a story to tell on their hostess.

"Emma T." as she is known affectionately by her sister Zontians, was giving an informal report of the convention of Zonta International while club members sat in the drawing room listening with interest. Then something happened. An intruder entered. He had found his way into the house through an open screen door during the rain which drove the club members inside from their picnic and meeting.

"Emma T." gave him one glance, put aside the convention report, armed herself with an improvised fly swatter and went after him. her aim was sure and he was promptly dispatched whereupon the meeting was resumed and the report continued—And now it's the story of "Emma T. and the Fly" instead of "The Spider and the Fly" when Zonta members tell it.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Devotion.

A mothers' love, beyond compare,
At nothing stops; will all things dare.
—Old Mother Nature.

Tommy, Sue and Sammy were looking at a freshly killed Woodchuck that had been found on top of the wire pen in which was the young Fox they had rescued the day before. Sue and Sammy wanted to know how it came to be there and Tommy had cryptically replied, "Mother love put it there."

"Talk sense," said Sammy disgustedly.

But Sue had caught the meaning. "Do you mean that Mrs. Reddy killed that Chuck and put it up there?" she asked eagerly.

Tommy looked at her approvingly. "Yes, either Mrs. Reddy or Reddy killed that Chuck early this morning, probably Mrs. Reddy. She was the one who was with this young Fox when we found him and she watched us take him away."

"But what did she bring the Chuck here for" Sammy wanted to know.

"For that young Fox of course, stupid," replied Sue, and Tommy grinned.

"But he couldn't get it up there," persisted Sammy.

"Of course he couldn't, but she didn't know that when she brought it. She left it anyway. Perhaps she thought we would give it to him," replied Sue.

"Which is just what we will do," spoke up Tommy. Opening a little door in the pen he tossed in the Chuck. "Now we'll go to breakfast and give this fellow a chance to eat his," said he.

And half an hour later still a shadowy form leaped lightly up on the pen

Sue and Sammy were full of questions. "Do you think she'll come again and bring him something more? Do you think if we keep watch we can see her? Do you suppose Reddy Fox will come too? Do you think she will come during the day or only at night?"

"She won't come in daytime; you may be sure of that," Tommy assured them. "If she pays him another visit it will be after dark."

"It won't be dark tonight because there is a moon," said Sammy.

"That won't stop her. When there is moonlight there always are plenty of shadows," Tommy answered.

Sue jumped up excitedly. "Tommy," she cried, "why can't we sit up tonight and keep watch?"

"That's an idea! Of course we can. Let's do it," cried Sammy.

So Tommy agreed and that afternoon he prepared a place in the barn for a hiding place. He bored three holes through which they could peep and have a clear view of the pen where the young Fox was. He arranged a plank on which they could sit and be comfortable.

"We may have to sit here half the night, and we can't talk or move around. The least suspicious sound will put her on her guard and she will keep away," he explained.

"That's all right," said Sammy. "I guess we can keep as still as you can."

If Tommy doubted it he said nothing, and after supper when the Black Shadows crept out over the Purple Hills across the Green Meadows to the farmyard they took their places in the barn. At first it was fun for Sue and Sammy to look through the peepholes and wonder where Mrs. Reddy was and if she was even approaching. After a while moonlight chased back the Black Shadows. Only close to the buildings and under the trees did they linger, but there they seemed blacker than ever.

There were no sounds save the muffled stamp of hoofs in another part of the barn, the cows chewing their cuds and now and then the faint squeak of a Rat. It was hard to sit still. It was especially hard for Sammy. He began to fidget. His feet made scuffing sounds on the floor. He yawned audibly. At last he could stand it no longer.

"I don't believe that old Fox is coming back again. I'm going to bed," said he. Sue felt much as he did. Tommy said nothing, but grinned in the dark. Half an hour later he led the way back to the house and half an hour later still a shadowy form leaped lightly up on the pen and lay there for some time.

Mrs. George M. Pryor Is Hostess To Takoma Park Woman's Club

Garden Section Journeys to Weathered Oak Herb Gardens Before Luncheon; Sees Beautiful Wisteria Which Come From 10-Cent Store.

The garden section of the Takoma Park Woman's Club, which links together the organization's activities for the year, yesterday journeyed to the Weathered Oak Herb Gardens, followed by a luncheon at the home of Mrs. George M. Pryor, of Bradley Hills, Md. The garden group has its sessions from May to October, instead of from October to May, thus giving members an opportunity to see each other's gardens in bloom and to exchange practical suggestions on the care of plants.

The meeting of the section was held yesterday in Mrs. Pryor's garden beneath an oak tree nearly 50 feet high, over which wistaria has grown until it forms almost a canopy. The vine which now makes one of the show places of the neighborhood and whose fragrance scents the whole vicinity when it is in blossom, came originally from a 10-cent store, Mrs. Pryor told the section members. She planted it and for ten years it "just grew" and had almost no flowers. Then it began to bloom and has been a revelation of beauty each season, she said. It is now nearly 15 years old.

Nature Trips Are Discussed

There was discussion during the meeting of the opportunity for nature study and visiting places of interest in the District, which is afforded by the Sunday outings conducted by the National Park and Planning Commission. Several of the section members were in the party which met last Sunday for a hike along the nature trail in Rock Creek Park in the morning and a tour of the Capitol grounds in the afternoon. They were conducted by a member of the commission who pointed out different varieties of trees and discussed their suitability to the climate and other points of interest about them. The trips are inexpensive and provide much of value in the way of information as well as an enjoyable Sunday outing, said Mrs. J. A. Quinn, reporting on them. By writing the Internal Revenue Bureau to be put on the mailing list, notices of the trips can be received regularly, she said.

The next meeting of the garden section will be held at the home of Mrs. Frederick Pratt, 120 Chestnut street, Takoma Park. A talk will be given on Japanese flower arrangements.

Mrs. E. E. Boyner, chairman of the section, was not present yesterday, as she is spending part of the summer in North Dakota. Among other members who are off on vacations are Mrs. P. D. Smith, a former president of the club, who is in Michigan; Mrs. F. A. Johnson, who is in Maine; Mrs. H. I. Houston, who has gone to Seattle; Mrs. L. M. Spray, to California, and Mrs. A. D. Stedman, who is on a trip to the Pacific Coast.

Other Members Plan Vacations

Mrs. W. P. Harman, president of the club, who was among those at yesterday's meeting, expects to leave in a few days for a visit in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Mrs. Andrew Moyer, secretary of the section, will go in August to Quebec with Mr. Moyer. Among those who visited the herb gardens and later attended the luncheon were Mrs. Guy Goodman, Mrs. Theron C. Brooks, Mrs. Ruth Cordier, Mrs. M. S. Kurz, Mrs. H. E. Ewing, Mrs. A. S. Lingle and Mrs. M. T. Himmelwright.

Mrs. J. N. Quinn, former chairman of the section, and Mrs. M. A. Ferrell attended the luncheon, but did not visit the herb garden. Mrs. J. A. Robertson and Miss Ella Tingley visited the garden but were unable to be present for the luncheon.

Quota International Honors Lady Astor

19th Convention Approves Women's Archives Plan.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Banff Springs, Canada, July 18. Quota International, at the closing session of its ninteenth general convention, conferred a life membership on Lady Astor, of Britain, the former Nancy Langhorne, of Virginia.

Elsie M. Yellis, of Pennsylvania, retiring president, summarizing activities of the three-day session which adopted a program of good citizenship, designated as the high point of the convention the approval of her recommendation that achievements of women be recognized by arousing general interest in the establishment of a world center for women's archives.

Miss Gwladys Jones, executive secretary of Quota International, and Miss Mary Jane Winfree, president of the local club, were among those from Washington at the convention.

Queen Marie Dies of Rare Liver Ailment

day and on Sunday her condition became worse.

Bowed at her bedside at the end was King Carol, her son, whose accession in a coup in June, 1930, virtually brought an end to her long and powerful influence in the shaping of Rumania's destinies.

The two once had differed bitterly over politics and Carol's red-haired friend, Magda Lupescu—but since they had become reconciled.

Queen Marie, a granddaughter of England's Queen Victoria, was credited with keeping Rumania on the side of the Allies during the World War when she had a strong voice in the actions of her husband, King Ferdinand.

Upon Ferdinand's death in 1927 she retained this power while Rumania was ruled by a regency, Carol's 5-year-old son Michael taking the throne. This ended with Carol's coup in 1930.

As news of the Queen's death spread all Rumania went into mourning, from prince to peasant. Rumanians particularly loved their dowager queen for her ability to feel and act like a Rumanian despite her English-Russian origin.

To Rest Beside Husband.

The Queen will be buried at the Palace of Kurtea de Argesch, 80 miles from Bucharest, next to her husband. The vault there long has been prepared for her. Funeral details have not been settled.

Prime Minister Miron Cristea, who also is patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church, administered extreme unction just before she died. He celebrated mass immediately afterward. Then as head of the government he ordered official mourning throughout the land.

All music was forbidden. Theaters, cinemas and other places of amusement were ordered closed until after the funeral. Black flags were flown at half-mast from public buildings. Masses were held in churches tonight throughout Rumania.

By the Associated Press.

Played Important Role.

Marie, dowager queen of Rumania, attained international prominence by the important role she played in shaping the destiny of her adopted country during and after the World War.

English by birth but reigning as consort of a Hohenzollern, she was credited with keeping Rumania from being drawn into the struggle on the side of the central powers and ultimately bringing it into the struggle as one of the allies. Its army was routed and the country forced to sue for an armistice in December, 1917, but in the end the kingdom was materially expanded and, as a member of the "Little Entente," along with Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, became a pivotal state in the postwar Danubian problem.

But while Rumania thus was involved in a changing political picture, Queen Marie had to struggle with tangled family affairs. Before her husband, King Ferdinand, died in 1927, her eldest son, Carol, had renounced his family and inheritance to live in France with an inamorata, Magda Lupescu. The throne thereupon went to his 5-year-old son, Michael, under a regency of five, with Queen Marie and Prince Nicholas, her second son, as representatives of the dynasty.

That regime lasted until June, 1930, when Carol, by a spectacular airplane dash, returned to oust his son and reclaim the throne. The coup virtually erased his mother as a political force. She had played that role for many years, for King Ferdinand was inclined to leave state affairs to his ministers and his queen.

Her trip to the United States in 1926, ostensibly to dedicate a museum of fine arts built near Seattle by Samuel Hill, a former Red Cross officer in Rumania, was credited with having been a factor in bringing American investments in Rumania up to more than $25,000,000 by 1930.

Out of the political picture thereafter, Marie devoted herself to literary work and charity. She was especially active in child welfare and was instrumental in having the playgrounds of Bucharest improved and extended. Although, as she admitted, she sometimes spent 12 hours a day at her writing, she was seen frequently at the opera and maintained a keen interest in the theater.

Kissed Carol on Birthday.

She and Carol long remained estranged over his abandonment of his wife, former Princess Helen of Greece, for Marie had been largely instrumental in arranging that match. But Rumanians saw hope of a reconciliation between mother and son when, in October, 1936, she kissed him on the occasion of his forty-third birthday.

Her health failed in 1937. An attack of grippe in March was complicated by phlebitis and an internal hemorrhage. There was a recurrence of the latter in June and again early in November. The third was so severe that eight noted specialists were summoned in consultation. Carol canceled a hunting trip to be near his mother and her daughters, Queen Marie of Yugoslavia and Archduchess Ileana, were summoned to Zotrozeni Castle.

Noted for her beauty, she was resourceful, versatile and intellectual to a degree, perhaps unequaled by any other queen of her time. Yet she was democratic, friendly and approachable and altogether one of the most human of sovereigns.

Few royal consorts have wielded greater influence than did Queen Marie during the reign of her husband, King Ferdinand. Her great interest in her adopted country and its development began when she took up her residence in Rumania after her marriage to Ferdinand when he was still a prince.

It was during the World War, however, and the troublesome years after the conflict that Queen Marie by her conspicuous activities attained international prominence. Ferdinand, who had been a prince of the house of Hohenzollern, ascended the Rumanian throne in 1914.

At the outbreak of the great war, the King announced that Rumania would remain neutral unless attacked, but his government's sympathy in the conflict was indicated when the King was shouted down during a speech from the throne in November, 1915.

Early in the next year the former Kaiser sent a note to King Ferdinand declaring his intention to send a special envoy to Rumania relative to the latter's position in the war. A few days later Rumania entered the conflict on the side of the Allies by declaring war against Austria. That decision was said to have been influenced by Queen Marie.

After two years of fighting, two-thirds of Rumania was overrun by the enemy. The country, cut off from outside aid, was forced to accept drastic peace terms sent by Germany with an ultimatum they be accepted in 24 hours. Queen Marie insisted she never would recognize the treaty that had been forced upon her country and immediately took the lead in a movement to have Rumania re-enter the war on the side of the Allies. With the collapse of the German army on the western front a few months later, the treaty that forced Rumania out of the war became ineffective.

During the war the queen was active in relief work among her people and also served as a Red Cross nurse in the war area.

Queen Marie was born at Eastwell Park, Kent, England, October 29, 1875. Her father, the second son of Queen Victoria, was Alfred, Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and Duke of Edinburgh. Her mother was the Grand Duchess Marie Alexandrovna, only daughter of Alexander II, Czar of Russia. Marie was married to Ferdinand in 1893. They had six children, of whom Prince Mircea, the youngest, died in childhood in 1916.

The others were Prince Carol, born in 1893; Princess Elizabeth, born in 1894, who became the wife of former King George of Greece; Princess Marie, born in 1899, who married King Alexander of Yugoslavia; Prince Nicholas, born in 1903, who eloped with Mme. Jana Lucia Deletj, a Rumanian commoner, and Princess Ileana, who married Archduke Anton of Austria.

Although Ferdinand and Marie ascended the thrones of Rumania in 1914, their coronation was delayed because of the World War and postwar conditions in their country until October, 1922. King Ferdinand died July 20, 1927.

In October of the previous year Queen Marie, accompanied by Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana, came to the United States, and during a five weeks' stay made a tour of many of the principal cities. The royal party was received enthusiastically everywhere and at the White House President and Mrs. Coolidge gave a state dinner for them. They sailed for home November 23, their visit somewhat abbreviated because of the illness of King Ferdinand.

Queen Marie spoke English, French, German, Rumanian and some Russian. She was an accomplished painter and pyrographist, an expert in the cultivation of flowers, and was intensely interested in music and literature.

In her official duties and literary work, in which she engaged more actively after the death of King Ferdinand, Queen Marie usually put in 12 hours daily. These with the many other interests that claimed her attention so occupied her time that it was said she seldom slept more than five or six hours.

Marie was once described as "a queenly mother and a motherly queen." As her five children grew to maturity she exercised both these characteristics, trying to arrange marriages for them that would be truly royal and enhance the prestige of the family.

Carol was her greatest trial because of his escapades, although Nicholas' elopement disappointed his mother and Ileana's union with a scion of the impecunious Hapsburgs was not the fulfillment of all of Marie's hopes.

Carol's first big escapade came in the early stages of the World War when he left his troops at the front and eloped with Jeanne Lambrino, a Rumanian commoner. He gave her up when his mother brought Helen of Greece to his notice, the royal marriage taking place in 1921. Three years later Carol became infatuated with Magda Lupescu, a divorcee, renounced his rights to the throne and fled to Paris. They lived in France five years.

Meanwhile, King Ferdinand had died and Carol's and Helen's young son Michael had been proclaimed king with Queen Marie, Prince Nicholas and three dignitaries of the church and state as regents. Helen divorced Carol in 1928. The regency, with Queen Marie in a principal role, lasted until June, 1930, when the errant prince reappeared in Bucharest, dethroned his son and assumed the crown as Carol II. Thereafter, the political prestige of Queen Marie waned steadily and she finally went into virtual retirement to write her memoirs.

"Do your duty, be good to others. Have the faculty of forgiving seventy times seven. Take joy where you can, find it and live it with all your heart. Keep a clean tongue in your head. If possible, hurt no man. Believe, hope, forgive. Be patient, never despair. In the hour of adversity square your shoulders and lift up your head to God and to the stars. The sun and heaven lie behind the clouds."

Ability to speak five languages made Queen Marie a brilliant conversationalist and was to her, she once said, like living so many different lives. Her spoken and written expressions were replete with wit, refind humor and delicate feeling. She was of independent thought, which was indicated by her views on religion.

Although King Ferdinand was of the Catholic faith, Queen Marie was a communicant of the Protestant Church of England. Hers, however, was a sort of individual or personal religion.

"Church never played a great part in my life," she once said. "Without being a free-thinker, I am very much above the differences of creed. I am a stanch Protestant and never felt tempted to change my religious confession, as I found a freedom in the Protestant Church that is unallowed in others. We need religion, but I prefer mine without barriers or restrictions, doctrines or canons, aggressive creeds or narrow dogmas."

Not overfond of society, the queen preferred the company of and conversation with a few clever people. She was youthful in heart and spirit in all her mannerisms and always loved to have young people around her. She liked music, the opera, the theater, motion-pictures, dancing and automobile riding, but her greatest passions were horseback riding and the cultivation of flowers. She could identify any flower, tree or vine and took pride in the credit that had been given to her for having introduced into Rumania a love of flowers.

Parlor games, bridge and card games generally bored Queen Marie, but she enjoyed tests of wit and intelligence. Among the latter she classed cross-word puzzles and questions and answers. She seldom touched alcoholic drink, not because she was opposed to prohibition but simply because, she once said, she did not like it.

Simplicity in personal appearance which appealed to the queen was illustrated in the matter of dress. Although her position demanded sumptuous and costly raiment, she preferred the plainest garb of everyday life. Except on great state occasions when she was obliged to wear the crown jewels, a simple necklace usually was the only adornment of jewelry.

Mrs. HOHN finds ELECTRIC COOKING more economical!

"With much doubt as to the outcome, we bought a four burner and oven electric stove. We have now been cooking with electricity for two years and are thoroughly convinced that it is the cheapest and best method of cooking."

(Signed) MRS. JOHN F. HOHN
FORESTVILLE, MD.

Mrs. Hohn speaks from experience

Yes, Mrs. Hohn speaks from experience! She has been an enthusiastic Electric Range user for two years. She is one of more than 15,000 homemakers in Washington and vicinity who have already adopted Electric Cooking.

For the month of June, Mrs. Hohn's electric bill was only $4.98 . . . $4.98 for electricity to operate ALL her appliances, her lights, washing machine, water pump, refrigerator, and her Electric Range. That's economy . . . and just one of the reasons why the number of Electric Range users is increasing with "PEPCO's" cheap electricity for all home service. Electrical dealers and department stores are now offering a $15.00 allowance for your old stove on the purchase of a Modern Electric Range.

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JULY 19, 1938 13

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

San Diego, Calif., July 18, 1938.

Only one man can say with certainty whether Franklin Roosevelt will run for a third term, and he is off fishing and isn't saying until some fine day in June, 1940.

But many men can say whether he would be re-elected if his decision in June, 1940, is "I will."

Paul McNutt . . . nominee?

* * * *

After watching scores of crowds along his triumphal route and talking with hundreds of men—and women—in the ten days since President left Washington, the answer is unavoidable and unmistakable.

* * * *

Roosevelt could be elected to a third term in 1940 with astonishing ease. Very likely his majority would be as great as his 1936 majority.

* * * *

I say this, though I am opposed to a third term, though most of those who say they would vote for him in 1940 are opposed to a third term, and though Franklin Roosevelt is opposed to a third term.

"—the biggest fish of all."

Only one thing President Roosevelt said on his journey just ended might be interpreted—by magnifying a few polite sentences and endowing them with disproportionate significance—as bearing on the 1940 prospects.

* * * *

He told almost every crowd along the tracks: "I hope to see you again," or "I shall look forward to seeing you again."

He also told them:

"I'd like to spend more time with you."

These, of course, are merely the amiable language of politeness.

But in June, 1940, they might seem singularly sardonic, prophetic and significant. Then Mr. Roosevelt might be pardoned if he enjoyed a quiet little laugh about them.

* * * *

A substantial fraction of the men on this train, who have seen a lot of him before and who have watched him and the crowds this trip with the third-term riddle uppermost in their minds, are convinced that he will run in 1940, for one elementary reason:

Because there is no other Democrat whom he could trust to carry on the New Deal who can unquestionably be nominated and elected.

"—passing the New Deal baton."

His adversaries have hugged to their bosoms the one consolation that any President who reached for a third term would be defeated.

The answer to this fond illusion could be read plainly in the faces of the crowds which have looked up at the rear platform of the train on which we have lived the last ten days.

* * * *

No one wants a third-term President. Twelve years of one man is too much of a strain for a democracy. If we had 12 years of one President, we might have 20 years of the next one, and we Americans like some variety in our Presidents.

* * * *

One of the gentlemen who sidestepped a handshake with Franklin Roosevelt on this trip told me he would bet one to five that McNutt of Indiana will be the Democratic nominee. Unless President Roosevelt sees a better chance for passing the New Deal baton without dropping it, unless the opposition inside and outside his own party to his plans is mitigated, I think Franklin Roosevelt is a better one to five bet.

U.S. Commissioner Faces Rum Charge

Hearing on a charge of driving while "at all under the influence of intoxicants," filed against United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, was postponed last night until July 27 at Turnage's request.

Justice of the Peace William A. Bopp, of Cottage City, Md., who was to have heard the case last night, said the hearing would be held at 9 p. m. in the town hall at Colmar Manor.

Turnage was arrested Saturday night by Maryland State Patrolman N. W. Scarborough after his car was involved in a minor collision on the Landover road.

U. S. Ship Believed In Irish Collision

London (Tuesday), July 19 (AP).—The Irish motor vessel Munster, 4,300 tons, collided off Skerries fishing town 15 miles north of Dublin, with a ship believed to be the American steamer West Cohas of New Orleans, 5,600 tons, Lloyds reported early today.

Tax Advisory Committee Meets at District Building

390 Families Dropped From D.C. Relief Roll

Shortage of Funds Forces 15 Per Cent Cut Upon Welfare Board.

Welfare officials announced yesterday 390 families here were dropped from general assistance rolls during June and in 60 cases, or 15 per cent of the total, the reason given was shortage of relief funds.

Miss Hazel Spicer, statistician for the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare, stated in a report the total of general public assistance and the number of recipients has decreased steadily during the last three months.

"Some of the decrease was, of course, due to normal seasonal fluctuations," she stated. "In June, however, the definite decline was caused primarily by the fact that the appropriation available for general public assistance was to be greatly decreased as of July 1, making it necessary to eliminate from the pay rolls all but the most needy unemployable cases."

127 Now Employable.

Of the total number dropped, 127 cases, or 32 per cent, had been temporarily unemployable but are now classified as employable. Of these 37 were assigned to WPA or NYA jobs, 18 secured private employment and 72 were said to be available for employment.

Ninety-three cases were transferred to other relief status. Thirty persons were declared eligible for Blue Plains, and 12 were sent to other public institutions, including hospitals and jails.

In 13 cases further investigation revealed the clients were ineligible for relief and they were dropped. Three cases of the total received unemployment compensation.

Relief Rolls Pared.

Miss Spicer said in paring the relief rolls it was decided that when persons over the age of 65 years could not care for themselves and could not prove eligible for old-age assistance, relief must be discontinued. These cases were offered care at the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, she said.

In addition, eligibility for some other type of public assistance was established for 49 persons removed from the general assistance rolls so that they were transferred to old-age assistance, aid to dependent children, or blind aid.

Budgets Revised.

Not only was it necessary to reduce the number of cases as of the first of this month, Miss Spicer stated, but all budgets had to be revised for every recipient of general public assistance or aid to dependent children, in accordance with a plan approved by the Welfare Board recently.

There was also a decrease in the number of families who received aid to dependent children during June, she reported. This was probably because the limited staff was unable to get cases written up for approval due to the confusion resulting from closing and transferring cases, re-budgeting of cases, reduction of staff, and the closing of one district office during the first week in June, she said.

West Virginia Society To Cruise Tomorrow

The West Virginia State Society will sponsor a moonlight cruise on the City of Washington tomorrow. The boat will leave the Seventh street wharf at 8:30 p. m. Guest of honor will be Miss Betty Gray, who has been chosen queen of the tomato festival to be held in September at Berkeley Springs.

D. C. Tax Study to Disregard Theory, Director Declares

Survey to Be Based on Experience and Observation, Dr. Pond Says at First Meeting With Advisory Committee; 7-Year-Plan Hinted.

Dr. Chester Pond, who will direct the survey of the District tax structure, said yesterday his study would be "empirical."

Meeting for the first time yesterday with his advisory committee in the District Building, the New York economist also spoke of a 7-year experimental plan which would be used as a basis for a permanent tax structure.

"I have very little to say at this particular time," Dr. Pond stated, "except that the study will be empirical."

He explained this as a study which depends upon "experience or observation alone, without due regard to science or theory."

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, present at the conference, said he was satisfied the work and results of the pending survey would be beneficial to Congress next session in working out a permanent program.

"I have still to appoint two assistants to aid me in my work," Dr. Pond said.

Benjamin F. Adams, assistant District assessor was "loaned" to Dr. Pond. Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, was named chairman of the advisory committee, composed of five citizens and five District officials.

Dr. Pond several years ago served with the so-called Jacobs committee on fiscal relations. At that time he aided in making a survey of the District-Federal fiscal relations, but the recommendations of the body was denounced by Congress.

"I have followed the tax situation here with interest since that time," Dr. Pond said yesterday.

Analysis of the present structure will act as a prelude to the survey, which must be completed and ready for report before January 15. A sum of $10,0000 has been appropriated for the work.

It is the directors' intention, he said, to break down the tax system into its elements, such as business privilege tax, and real estate tax, and with this as a basis discover the good and bad points of each tax.

Recommendations based on the survey will be included in the report, Dr. Pond said.

Season on Ducks Lengthened; Daily Limit Is Doubled

An increase of 15 days in the open season on ducks and other migratory waterfowl and in the number of birds allowed in a hunter's possession daily from one bag of 10 to two bags of 10 was announced yesterday by the Biological Survey.

The new 45-day season will open in the southern zone which includes Maryland and Virginia, on November 15, and will close December 29. The order covers ducks, geese, jacksnipe and coon.

In addition, hunters will be allowed to kill a few canvasback, ruddy, redhead and bufflehead ducks, which have been fully protected for the last two years. Three of one species or three in the aggregate may be shot in one day.

Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the survey, said easing of the restrictions was due to an increase in ducks since the strict control of the last several years, improved conditions in Northern breeding grounds and the Federal refuge program.

Man Cows 6 Clerks, 15 Patrons, Leaves Store With $136 Loot

An armed bandit yesterday snatched $136.14 from the cash register of a Sanitary Grocery Store at Wisconsin avenue and Van Ness street northwest before 6 clerks and 15 panic-stricken customers and escaped in an automobile parked outside.

Harry Coldren and E. L. Wilsoncroft, butchers in the store, followed the man on foot, then "commandeered" a delivery truck and pursued the car three blocks before it eluded them.

The license plates of the automobile were turned upward so tag numbers were not visible.

Institute Arranged.

Richmond, Va., July 18 (AP).—Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said today a five-day doctors' helpers institute would be conducted at the University of Virginia from July 25 to 29.

Who'll Pay for E St. Paving? Why, Transit Firm, of Course

Two years ago the District Commissioners ordered the Capital Transit Co. to remove a set of abandoned street car tracks on E street, between Eleventh and Fourteenth streets northwest.

Yesterday the company began the removal.

Immediately following the order two years ago, there developed the question of who would foot the bill, not only for removing the tracks, but for paving the street after the tracks were torn up.

The company said it would pay for the removal of the tracks but not for paving the street. The District said no paving was contemplated by the Highway Department.

So, it went to court. In fact, it went to two courts. First, the District Supreme Court, where the Commissioners' order was upheld. Then to the Court of Appeals, who agreed, too.

The job, which will require two weeks, is being done in sections, first of which is between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. Then they will work between Eleventh and Thirteenth streets. Cost of the job is $11,400.

The District, it turns out, will pave the street—but the company will foot the bill.

Alumnus of Big House Returns to Thank Pair Who Inspired Him to 'Go Straight' in 1924

An alumnus of the Atlanta Penitentiary came back to Police Headquarters last night, but not in the nightly roundup of suspected gunmen, burglars and auto thieves, which is the usual way matriculates of the "big house" return.

He came with a deed for a home, a letter of commendation from the man he works for in the Baltimore Gas & Electric Co., and pictures of a wife and three kids. He came with tears in his eyes and asked for Detective Sergts. Henry Jett and Gene Davis.

He had seen neither of them since a day 14 years ago when the judge had said "three years," for the auto theft for which Jett and Davis had arrested him. He had turned to Jett and Davis that day and thanked them for the many little kindnesses they had shown him while he was awaiting trail, for the cigarettes they had brought him and the magazines and papers.

"You'll never know how much I appreciated that," he had said. "But one of these days I'll come back and prove what a man you've made of me. When I get out I'm going straight."

Davis and Jett had been policemen for a couple of decades and were frankly cynical. They said:

"Oh yeah! Where have we heard that one before?"

Last night the man, now 32, looked up and said, "Are you Jett?" because 14 years had made Jett almost unrecognizable. Then the man showed the detective the deed, the letter and the pictures.

"Darned if you didn't do it," was all Jett could find to say.

Jett, Davis and the man then made plans for a reunion in Baltimore with the wife and kids.

Aim of Gathering Is to Send Food Ship to Besieged Port.

High New Deal officials on the platform and nearly 1,000 persons in the audience heard the Administration's policy as regards Spain denounced at a mass meeting in the Rialto Theater last night on the second anniversary of the outbreak of the Spanish Civil War.

They also heard a white-haired Irish Catholic priest, in clerical garb, plead the cause of Republican Spain and assert that "the church is used as a vehicle of political intrigue." The priest, the Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, said he had been suspended from the church for his activity on behalf of the Irish in their struggle for independence; but in private conversation after his talk, he insisted that his last suspension had been revoked a dozen years ago.

Sponsored by the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy, the meeting was held to promote the campaign for a "food ship" that will be sent to loyalist Spain in September. Leon Henderson, economic adviser to the WPA, presided. Speakers included Father O'Flanagan; Robert Morss Lovett, of the editorial staff of the New Republic; Jay Allen, newspaper correspondent, and Frank Palmer of the Federated Press.

Maritime Aid Attends.

Over the platform swung a huge banner reading: "Quarantine Aggressors—'There is no escape from mere isolation'—President Roosevelt." It was flanked by the American and Spanish republican flags.

Criticizing President Roosevelt for sending a congratulatory message to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain on the conclusion of the Anglo-Italian accord, Lovett declared "the only danger of war is that the American people will wish to make war—which may come from the subterfuges and lies told on the pretense of keeping out of war."

"Twenty years ago today," said Lovett, veteran professor of English at the University of Chicago, "my own son was killed at Belleau Wood. He would rather have died in the cause of republican Spain than in the cause of England, the House of Morgan and all the rest."

Holds Treaty Violated.

He said American treatment of Spain was "disgraceful" and declared that the United States arms embargo was a violation of a treaty of 1899, guaranteeing freedom of commercial intercourse with Spain.

Allen, who has reported the Spanish civil war for the Chicago Daily News, referred to the International Brigade as "boys who know what Mr. Hull and President Roosevelt don't seem to know—that this is the war to make the world safe for democracy."

While the Spanish government is in need of arms and munitions, he said, "President Roosevelt is fishing and Hull is poring over a trade treaty, I suppose." The embargo on shipment of war materials to Spain "is maintained by a very small minority in the State Department," he charged.

Father O'Flanagan urged Catholics to form their political views independently of their priests. "I know too much about the history of my own church to be impressed by its political opinions," he said.

At one point in his address he stated that "the Pope is a friend and admirer of Gen. Franco" and later he asserted that "bishops who accept the politics of the Pope are unworthy of the citizenship of any country in the world except that of the Vatican."

2 Brothers Admit $910 Holdup With 25-Cent Toy Gun

Police said yesterday two brothers had signed confessions that they staged a $910 robbery on June 30 with a toy pistol they had bought for 25 cents. They were held for investigation.

Police said the men held up Michael Polyzois, night manager of the Olympia Bakery, 507 Fourth street southwest, which is located within a block of the Fourth Precinct Station.

Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson praised Detective Lieut. John Fowler and Detective Sergts. Elmer Lewis, J. J. Tolson, E. E. Thompson and Paul Ambrose for the arrest of the suspects.

Africa Missionary Addresses Session

The Women's Missionary Society of the Southern Methodist Church held its district zone meeting yesterday afternoon at Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South.

Miss Katherine Eye, of Glenelk, Md., recently consecrated and commissioned to the missionary field in Africa, spoke. Others who participated were Miss Roma Cupp, of Fairfax, Va., assigned to home mission work in Memphis, and Miss Virginia Henry, of Nashville, Tenn.

Among special guests were the Rev. Ralph Sharpe and Dr. Edward Beery, presiding elder of the Baltimore area of the Southern Methodist Church. Mrs. Nell Clarke was chairman.

D. C. Beauticians to Face Test If They Fail to Register Soon

All Experienced Cosmetologists to Be Approved by Board Providing They Apply for License; $5 Fee for Operators.

Washington's 4,000 beauty parlor operators, owners and managers of beauty schools and shops must register with the Board of Cosmetology, as provided by Congress, as soon after next Monday as possible, it was announced yesterday.

Registration must be completed early, it was explained, in order to escape an examination which will be given all present apprentices, learners, and those experienced workers who fail to register. The examination will be held the second Tuesday in October, but officials warned an early registration was preferred.

Applications will be received by the board at its new headquarters in the old Police Court Building, Sixth and D streets northwest.

Under the law enacted by Congress, all present experienced employes in the beauty culture industry will be blanketed under the Board of Cosmetology without an examination.

The initial registration fee for the issuance of a license, with or without examination, is as follows: $10 for owners, managers and instructors; $5 for operators; $3 for manicurists, and $100 for schools of cosmetology. Annual renewal fees are: $5 for owners, managers and instructors; $3 for operators; $2 for manicurists, and $50 for schools of cosmetology. The fee for a temporary certificate for a student or an apprentice is $2. Sales demonstrators or lecturers who canvass the District will be required to pay a $5 yearly license.

Out-of-town operators who can satisfy the board that they have had experience elsewhere and can furnish satisfactory proof they have engaged in the practice for at least five years will not be required to take the examination. They will, however, pay $15 for the initial registration fee.

On the basis of statistics compiled by the Minimum Wage Board, it was estimated the Board of Cosmetology would collect approximately $30,500 the first year. Any person called to aid the board in examinations, inspections or investigations, will be paid $10 a day.

The board members are Mrs. Julia F. Crandall, president; Miss Ethel M. Beebe, treasurer, and Mrs. Bessie J. Mercer.

Virginia to Revive Case to Eliminate Blimp at Airport

Richmond, Va., July 18 (AP).—Elimination from the National Airport at Washington of a blimp hangar will be considered again by the State Corporation Commission at a hearing called today for August 1.

The hangar, owned by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., is listed by airmen as among the several man-made hazards existing at the busy airport across the Potomac from Washington. Others are the Washington Monument, smokestacks and radio broadcasting towers.

The proceedings directed at clearing out these hazards as far as possible was continued generally by a commission order of January 12 following a hearing last November.

Unions Voice Confidence in D.C. Officials

Central Labor Group Scores 'Communists Fomenting Strife.'

Dies Committee Asked for Investigation of Radical Trend.

The Washington Central Labor Union last night sharply answered recent attacks on District public officials by expressing its "confidence" in the administration of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Police Commissioner Ernest W. Brown.

Denouncing "communistic groups who are bent on fomenting strife among the several races who comprise the population of the District of Columbia," the union asked the Dies committee investigating un-American activities to look into the work of alleged "communistic groups" in the District.

The resolution, unanimously adopted without discussion at a meeting in Typographical Temple, in the name of "more than 120,000 organized workers," was presented by a committee including John Locher, president of the union; Frank Coleman, secretary, and Robert Lester, financial secretary.

"It is the policy of the Communists to attack the public officials of a community and endeavor to bring these public officials into disrepute, hoping to thus destroy the Government itself," the resolution declared.

It continued: "The public officials of the District of Columbia have shown themselves to be men of the highest caliber interested in the welfare of all the citizens of the District of Columbia and by their fair-minded and impartial administration of the trust reposed in them have the confidence and respect of the vast majority of the citizens of the District of Columbia; therefore.

"Be it resolved, That the Washington Central Labor Union . . . expresses its confidence in the administration of District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Supt. of Police Ernest W. Brown, and requests the Dies Congressional committee to investigate the activities of communistic groups in the District of Columbia."

Drownings Claim Girl, 2, Boy and Ex-D.C. Policeman

In a ditch dug by her father to carry off water from a steep hillside near her home, Mary Lou Duff, 2, was swept to her death in a freshet caused by yesterday's rain storm. She slipped into the ditch while playing and swift waters sped her body 75 yards through a culvert.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Duff, of Coffeyville, 2 miles south of Alexandria.

Waters of the eastern branch of the Anacostia River claimed David Ashton, 17, colored, who was seized by cramps while swimming.

In the same river Harbor Police found the body of R. I. Posey, 1204 Floyd avenue northeast, former District policeman. Police said his wife received a suicide note.

Grinnell Heir Held Virginia Suicide

Charlottesville, Va., July 18 (AP).—Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney John M. Maury, jr., acting as coroner, returned a verdict of suicide in the death today of Francis B. Grinnell, native of New Bedford, Mass.

Grinnell, who recently inherited a part of the Grinnell Sprinkler Co. fortune, was found dead in his car on a secluded road near the city limits. He was the son of Mrs. E. M. Grinnell, of New York City, and the late Dr. Grinnell.

You Still Have Time to Choose Stars for "Gone With the Wind"

Nothing Is Signed, Nothing Delivered, on Long-Deferred Production of Mitchell Novel; De Titta to Paris; Capital Leads Guild Cities; Theater Notes.

OUT of all the hue and cry concerning the casting of Norma Shearer and Clark Gable in the roles of Scarlett O'Hara and Rhett Butler, respectively, in "Gone With the Wind," there have come at least a few reasonably authentic facts that are emphatically contrary to widespread public opinion. More or less succinctly put, they would line up about as follows:

BELL.

The screen rights to the Margaret Mitchell hefty novel are owned by David O. Selznick, who would like to cast Shearer and Gable in the principal parts—or so he insists. To secure their services, however, it will be necessary for him to sign a contract for release of the picture through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mr. Selznick hoppens to be the son-in-law of Louis B. Mayer, third name in the M.-G.-M. label, and also one of his most active competitors in the marts of film trade. No such contract has as yet been signed.

Norma Shearer is not a "power" on the M.-G.-M. lot, despite the fact that her late husband, Irving Thalberg, was one of its mainstays. She describes herself as "just one of the hired help," who plays the roles her studio assigns her.

She did not ask for the role of Scarlett, being in the nature of a fatalist in the matter of her screen parts. She neither seeks nor declines the vehicles selected for her by the M.-G.-M. production heads. She was not enthusiastic about the Katharine Cornell role in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," one of her greatest successes; she was enthusiastic about her role in "Private Lives," one of her less luminous efforts.

It was Miss Shearer's original impression that the final chapters of the book made Scarlett an utterly unsympathetic character, but she did not request a revision of the entire last half of the work to overcome this circumstance. She has read the script of the film play and applauds its rigid adherence to the spirit and the substance of the Mitchell fiction. When, as and if, the picture ever goes into production, with her in the stellar role, she will play Scarlett as she is written.

No one knows definitely outside of the M.-G.-M. and Selznick inner sanctums, whether Miss Shearer and Gable were named to boost interest in Miss Shearer's latest and greatest undertaking, "Marie Antoinette," or to sound public reaction to such casting and get a further line on mass public opinion as to what players really should be placed in the parts of Scarlett and Rhett.

Such is the situation as it exists as this is written on a soggy and thundery Monday afternoon. From that point on, you may do your own casting and make mind bets at whatever odds strike your fancy as to when, if ever, "Gone With the Wind" really will go into production. Your guess will be as good as anybody's.

Mr. Gable has been largely left out of this discussion because in a moment of inadvertence on the back lot of his ranch, he took a swipe at his eye with a dirty glove and picked himself up a very elegant case of infection. It is reported that he now is under bandages and feeling a little too rocky to discuss Rhett Butler, or anyone else—including himself.

In the manner of Leonard Lyons:

ARTHUR A. DE TITTA: Your impending trip to Paris, that is being so lustily rumored these past few days, will not be a vacation jaunt for you and your charming wife, Helen. You are being assigned to the Paris post for a stretch of years in the capacity of assistant to the European director of Fox Movietone News, which will take you and the Missus galivanting all over the Continent—you lucky so-and-so. The official orders from the home office will be coming along any day now and you will be expected to sail for your new "hitch" during the first week in August. Better take along more than one extra shirt and that other pair of slacks. You may be gone a long time, worse luck.

• • • •

As an utterly superfluous bit of public information, when the Arthur De Tittas leave Washington, the Capital will lose two of its most energetic and best-liked "showmen." As Washington chief of the Fox Movietone News office, Arthur has turned in many "scoops" for his company, been host to a long list of visiting stars from the Twentieth Century-Fox lot and has been a consistently active worker in all of the Variety Club's charitable undertakings. It was he, in association with Sam Wheeler, Washington manager of Twentieth Century-Fox Pictures, who recently guided Shirley Temple and her parents to all of the points of interest in and around the Capital of the Nation. Arthur accompanied the party to New York and arranged the visit to Hyde Park, where Shirley was the week-end guest of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. He has been a very useful fellow and deserves the recognition that has come to him. Mrs. De Titta also has been a prime mover in such theatrical activities sponsored by the Variety Club as have permitted the participation of the distaff membership. It was she and Mrs. Wheeler, who also turns around when you shout, "Red," who promoted the Bingo parties that returned handsome receipts to Variety's welfare fund for the underprivileged. Arthur and Helen will be deeply missed by a host of friends, come that first week in August.

For the benefit of those who missed its weekly attractions from the chart of residential bookings in Sabbath's issue of The Post, as well as the Virginia theatergoers in general, it should be said that the Ashton Theater, in Clarendon, Va., Arlington County's oldest motion picture house, will be closed over a period of a month for a rejuvenating face lifting.

It is announced that the facade of the theater will be doubled in size and a new marquee added to set off an enlarged lobby, new decorations, carpets and fixtures. New seats, air-conditioning and new sound and projection equipment also are being installed

The Ashton is a link in the chain of Neighborhood Theaters, Inc., Morton G. Thalhimer, president, functioning under the district managership of Wade Pearson. So now you know.

When Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's new Olney Theater opens next Monday night, with Elissa Landi in "The Lady Has a Heart," the inaugural performance will be attended by New York and Philadelphia critics as well as by those from Washington and Baltimore. Since an audience of distinction is expected to be in attendance, the society desks also will take a whirl at the event to spot the notables in the house.

Elmer Kenyon, of the Theater Guild's publicity staff, and Tom Kenyon, subscription manager of the American Theater Society in Pittsburgh, stopped off in this city on their way to a seashore vacation long enough to inform Bess Davis Schriener, local sales manager of the Guild and American Theater Society, that Washington heads the list of all five subscription cities in volume of reservations for next season. Washington, as of July 1, was running ahead of previous subscription bookings by a ratio of three to one. No other city has so large a percentage of increase.

Incidentally, all subscribers who have not as yet verified their requested seat locations are urged to do so at once. Miss Schreiner's office in the National Theater is open daily from 12 noon to 5:30 p. m. Checks are now due, payable not later than August 15.

Col. Orangelo Ratto, manager of Loew's Palace Theater and "Mayor of F Street," cranked up his juggernaut last Friday and rattled away on a two-week vacation motor trip to New England. During his absence the Palace is under the capable direction of Assistant Manager Stanley Barlup, a circumstance that offers complete assurance of its courteous and efficient conduct. There ought to be more Stanley Barlups scattered about the country's theaters.

Speaking of Loew's, after 14 weeks of anxiety and curiosity, the cause of your insomnia is about to be removed. In "The Last of the Rangers," the fifteenth and concluding chapter in the exciting serial screen play of "The Lone Ranger," the identity of this doughty Texan is to be revealed for the first time. This, of course, would be at Loew's Columbia Theater where this "Hi-ho, Silver" business has been running since goodness knows when.

The few installments seen by this column in preview have failed to give any clew as to who might be playing the title role. Perhaps there are many better guessers among the Columbia's habitual patrons. Anyhow, we'll all know Friday. Personally, I think I'll be able to wait.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

IN 1929, Jimmy Hines said "No" to the proposed nomination of Ferdinand Pecora for district attorney. Pecora was then the chief assistant district attorney and had been for the preceding eight years. If Hines had said "Yes" the most exciting events in New York's political history might not have transpired . . . The 70-year-old Thomas C. T. Crain was nominated instead—and elected. Pecora, one of America's foremost legalists, resigned and returned to private practice.

• • • •

If Hines had said "Yes" Pecora would not have been appointed in January, 1933, counsel to the Senate's Banking and Currency Committee to wind up its investigation . . . And the results of that investigation—the resignation of Charles E. Mitchell, head of the National City Bank; the expose of Albert H. Wiggin, head of the Chase Bank; the examinations of J. P. Morgan and Otto H. Kahn—never would have come to pass . . . If Hines had said "Yes" the stock exchange still would be governing itself, stock pools still would be operating and there'd be no Securities and Exchange Commission.

• • • •

In the meantime District Attorney Crain was unable to secure an indictment in the Ewald-Healy bribe case, and the Appellate division appointed Samuel Seabury to conduct an inquiry into the administration of the Magistrates' Court. Seabury then was appointed counsel to the legislative inquiry . . . If Hines had said "Yes" that would have been no need for a Seabury, Tammany still would be dominant in New York politics, Jimmy Walker still would be mayor of the city, Jacob Gould Schurman, Irving Ben Cooper and Samuel Hofstadter would not have been elevated to the bench, O'Brien still would have his surrogate's job and Fiorello La Guardia would have been only a candidate for Congress.

• • • •

In 1933 Pecora, who already had given evidence that he was the Nation's best prosecutor, was the reluctant candidate of the Recovery Party for the district attorneyship. Hines helped elect William C. Dodge—who proved unequal to the job of breaking New York's rackets . . . If Hines had said "Yes" Thomas E. Dewey never would have come into prominence as a racket buster—and Hines would not now be battling for his political life and liberty.

• • • •

IF JIMMY HINES had said "Yes" he would not now be called to appear for trial before the man since designated by Gov. Lehman to preside over the extraordinary special and trial term of the supreme court here—the man who since has become Justice Ferdinand Pecora.

• • • •

GANDHI was interviewed by a New York newspaperman last month and confessed that when he was 37 years old and Mrs. Gandhi had decided to make their marriage secondary to the consecration of their life in behalf of India . . . "At 37?" the reporter asked. "Why, you've given up more than 20 years of marriage?" . . . "That's true," was the reply, "but at 37, we already had been married for 25 years."

"READ THIS," writes Douglas Williams, American correspondent for the London Telegraph. " 'What an eventful year this will be for the world. Germany risen up strong and mighty and who knows what else there may not be to come? England is behaving ignobly, pitiably. We have no policy and refuse to raise our voices against the dismemberment of a faithful ally. We think we are secure in our island and so let carnage and violence go on unchecked. In my opinion, the prime minister is quite at sea in foreign policies and the rest of the cabinet are narrow-minded peace-at-any-price men' . . . The foregoing wasn't written today. It was written by my father, chief editor of Reuter's, in London, on September 11, 1870."

Furry Present.

Arleen Whelan, 20th Century-Fox "Cinederella Girl," has become the proud possessor of her first pet—a furry, plantively meowing kitten of uncertain ancestry but undoubted charm. The kitten, a gift to Miss Whelan from her close friend, Azadia Newman, noted artist, promptly was dubbed "Haggerty." Arleen is having made for "Haggerty" a blanket which she plans to have autographed by every star on the lot.

Why Film Prop Men Often Die In Their Youth

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, July 18 (U.P.).—The title of today's movie story is "Why the Prop Man Went Mad."

Abe Steinberg was the bedeviled property man, working on the set of a Twentieth Century-Fox picture called "By the Dawn's Early Light." Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, and Charles Winninger were the stars, while Gregory Ratoff, the Russian actor-writer, producer-director, was functioning in his fourth category.

When we arrived Steinberg was placing fruit cocktails on a dinner table in the home of the American consul in an unnamed Manchurian town. Winninger was the consul. Miss Faye was a Russian adventuress. Baxter was a roving newspaperman.

With the cocktails carefully placed on the table, the cameraman ready to go, and the performers starting to do the scene, a fly buzzed across Steinberg's canned fruit. He ran for a spray gun and set a vapor of insecticide across the dinner table. That fixed the fly, but it didn't appease Ratoff, who paced, and thought and frowned. Everybody was quiet while this went on. Suddenly Ratoff's face lit up.

Not Fruit, Fish!

"That's what's wrong," he said. "They don't have fruit cocktails in Manchuria. They have—maybe—fish. Get me some fish."

"What kind of fish?" Steinberg wanted to know.

"Shrimp," snapped Ratoff. "Canned shrimp."

The property department was fresh out of canned shrimp. So was the studio restaurant. Steinberg sent out to a grocery for a couple of cans of shrimp. This took time, because the Fox lot is many a long mile from the nearest food store.

Finally Steinberg's shrimp arrived. He dumped the fruit from the cocktail cups and filled them with shrimp. He doused the latter with ketchup and an hour and a half after the cocktail episode began, the cameras again were ready to turn.

Ratoff called his actors. Miss Faye looked at the shrimp and said:

"But I can't eat shrimp."

Can't Muss Coiffure.

We hate to be carping about the movies, but last night we saw a picture which made us snicker. It was Paramount's new epic of the Southwest, "The Texans," starring Joan Bennett, Randolph Scott and half a dozen others, and produced on a magnificent scale.

There were thousands upon thousands of cattle, which Miss Bennett and her friends drove through sandstorms and blizzards, raging rivers and Mexican deserts, Indian attacks and sorties by the Federal men. The action was ripsporting, the scenery was superb—and through all the storms of rain and snow and dust and bullets, Miss Bennett's beautifully marcelled hair remained as though she'd just left the hairdressing establishment of Max Factor.

Miss Bennett, incidentally is not alone among the Hollywood sisterhood in her desire to keep her tresses super-pluperfect. There also is Miss Hope Hampton.

A Dollar Per Gallon!

Miss Hampton is a beauteous blonde and every Sunday she has her hair shampooed in a patent mineral water. She uses usually about 10 gallons of the water per shampoo.

The other day the director at Universal Studios, where she is making "The Road to Reno," informed her that she would have to appear in a rainstorm scene which would drench her to the skin.

Miss Hampton said she would have to think about it but that she doubted whether she wanted the studio to squirt water on her. She said she'd let him know.

Half an hour later she announced: "If you will use my mineral water for your rain, all right; otherwise, no."

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 18.—While all of Hollywood was either seeing or being at the Cathay Circle Theater premier of "Marie Antoinette" among those not present were two women, touched with genius, who worked straight through the night and will be doing that for weeks to come — molding their own "Marie Antoinette" in wax.

HEDDA HOPPER

When "Marie Antoinette" open at the Astor Theater in New York, August 18, they'll show in the streets of that city from a stage built on the back of a de luxe bus, not a Punch and Judy show, but "Marie Antoinette" in miniature. Twenty-two of the most fascinating puppets ever seen. Six Norma Shearers as Marie in different costumes, three Robert Morley's as Louis XVI, three John Barrymores as Louis XV, two of Tyrone Power, three of Joseph Schildkraut, two of Mme. du Barry, Anita Louise, Alma Kruger and Henry Stephenson.

These figures are 3 feet high and dressed exactly as the characters on the screen. They walk, dance, curtsey and talk, using sound, track and dialogue from the actual picture. They are controlled by three experts—men who managed the Italian puppets when they made a tour of America a few years ago.

Most puppets are caricatures. These look as real as the people themselves. They'll tour almost every city in America and are being made by Catharine Stubergh first and second—mother and daughter.

The heads are done in clay, then wax. Wigs are made from real hair, each one put in separately by Mrs. Stubergh. Mother and daughter make all the costumes and jewelry, and doing this entirely from photographs. They're the first puppets they've ever made.

Mamma Stubergh is the third generation to make faces and figures. She was brought down from San Francisco in 1926 by Sid Grauman. The figures decorating the Chinese Theater are here and are so lifelike that when I first saw the one of Doug Fairbanks, I started to talk to it. They were made in 1920 and are just now having their faces lifted. Mamma said she hated to go to that theater and look at their dirty faces. Naturally, after 12 years' dust had drifted in a bit and settled on them. She's delighted that she's been asked to clean them up.

They have two figures in our museum here—Will Rogers and Charlie Chaplin. They did one of Mary Pickford, but weren't satisfied with it, so wouldn't let it be shown.

Young Catharine wanted to be a dancer—practiced with modeling clay in her hands. At 18 she did a head of Einstein, then one of Mae West. It was Mae's words of encouragement which persuaded her to give up dancing.

"Any girl can dance," Mae Said, "but one who can push mud about like you do should stick to mud, because it will stick to you."

She's stuck ever since. Catharine has been written up in American Woman's Who's Who. She has a life mask of Amelia Earhart, done just before she took off on that tragic trip, but never had time to finish it.

Their life-sized figure of Errol Flynn as Robin Hood, shown in a store window, brought out police reserves to keep crowds moving. Her face and figure of Marlene Dietrich caused a riot in New York.

They have heads of every star in Hollywood. Made 65 masks for the Ginger Rogers dance in "Shall We Dance?"

They made heads of the Dionne quintuplets for their first moving picture, which were used showing the Quints on the screen as they were when they were born. They've modeled the quints every year since.

Their model of Clark Gable was used in "Test Pilot." Did the Duke of Windsor fiddling with his tie. Had to stop working on President Roosevelt to finish the "Marie" order.

Glen Echo Park

Dancers who are looking for that "something new and different" in the way of music, found it last night in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park, where Herbie Holmes, the "Mississippi Maestro" and his orchestra began an engagement.

Holmes is offering "swing with a touch of the blues" and the young man from the banks of Old Man River was given a big hand by the Glen Echo guests, which seems to forecast a successful run.

The heat brought hundreds scurrying to the lavish Crystal Pool yesterday where the swimming and diving put the K. O. on old man humidity. Week-end business on the new "World Cruise" reached a new high, and the pleased customers continue to go for the new streamlined cars on the Dodgem Rides which is neck and neck in popularity with the speed boats on the waterway canal, judging from the week-end patronage.

Many families were noticed enjoying life in the spacious and shady picnic grounds at Glen Echo Park, where every convenience is provided.

Lucky.

A rabbit's foot serves as the good luck charm for lovely Sonja Henie, skating star now featured in "My Lucky Star." On her initial trip to America in 1929, she learned of the superstition and has carried one ever since.

Cross Roads

"The Ghost Train," Arnold Ridley's mildly eerie comedy-melodrama of an eventful evening in the waiting room of the railroad station at Clear Vale Junction, on a Maine branch line, continues to divert audiences at the Cross Roads Theater, at Baileys Cross Roads, Va., for a second week.

This play, familiar to Washington audiences from many presentations on local stages, is a favorite of stock organizations throughout the country and season after season reasserts its ability to thrill as well as amuse.

The present performance is notable for the excellent hayloft portrayals of important roles by Theodore Fields, Janice Norton, George Finger, Don Sisler, Peggy Mansfield, Ed Thrasher and the numerous other members of a competent cast, under the direction of C. Adolph Glassgold. The developments of the three acts take place between the hours of 10:30 p. m. and midnight on a single evening.

The curtain rises at 8:40 nightly.

The Roadside

The skill of W. S. Gilbert, famous librettist of the immortal Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, as an individual playwright is being demonstrated for a second week at the Roadside Theater, where the three-act farce, "Engaged," is the bill.

"Engaged" is a frank and hilariously written burlesque of the problems surrounding youthful marriage. Its speeches are verbose and stilted, but when played seriously result in rich and irresistible comedy. The Roadsiders read them as the author obviously intended they should be intoned.

Foremost among the "barn theater" thespians cast in this bizarre relic of the year 1877 may be mentioned such favorite mimes of the Rockville pike group as Richard Walsh, Mimi Norton, Lois Alexander, Fred Haskin, Lansing Hall, Howard Wierum, Milton Hirshfield and Betty Brunstetter. Anton Hardt, as usual, directed the play, with costumes in Dorothy Croissant's most effective mood.

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JULY 19, 1938 15

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Things I never knew about the National Football League until George Preston Marshall presented this department with a fresh copy of the constitution and by-laws:

That it is permissible for a club in the league to employ players under assumed names if the league president is properly notified.

POVICH.

That a team can be fined $1,000 for attempting to sign college players while they are still in college.

That membership in the league now costs a club $10,000 at the time the franchise is bought and $200 per season each year thereafter.

That a club which plays an exhibition game within the territory of another league member shall be fined $1,000 and is liable to expulsion from the league.

That any player who jumps a contract with a National League team cannot be reinstated as a league player until five years have elapsed.

Tough on Visitors.

That no club may change its uniform colors without permission of the league president. That the numbers on the jerseys may not be less than 8 inches long and 4 inches wide and that if the visiting team's colors conflict with the home team's colors, the visitors must procure new uniforms.

That each home player is entitled to one complimentary ticket for each home game, that visiting players are entitled to no complimentary tickets and that the visiting club's management may have 20 complimentary tickets.

That clubs traveling during the regular playing season must allow each player $2 per day for meals, plus lodging and transportation.

White Headgear Out.

That when a league game is played at night and a white football is used, no player in the game is permitted to wear white headgears.

That the club winning the league championship receives, in addition to its 15 per cent of the gate receipts of the championship game, a sum of $225 to purchase suitable trophies for its players.

That each home club must pay a visiting club at least $5,000 after each game, but that the visiting club has the privilege of accepting instead 40 per cent of the gross gate receipts after 15 per cent is deducted for park rent, 3 per cent for the league treasury, and Federal and State taxes deducted.

That players in the league receive only 75 per cent of their weekly salaries at the end of each week, the remaining 25 per cent being paid in a lump sum at the end of the season.

Two Days' Notice.

That a player or a coach can be fired on two days' notice unless special provision is made in the player's contract.

That a player who participates in professional football while still a member of a college team is barred for life from the National League.

That a club claiming a player released by another club on waivers must pay the second club only $10.

The five clubs which finish in the second division of the league are entitled to two more choices in the college draft list than the five top clubs.

That under the league's code of ethics, club operators and their associates are expected to conduct themselves as gentlemen.

That operators of clubs in the league are bound by the decisions of the president and have agreed to waive their rights to recourse in courts of law.

That any club expelled from the league may apply for reinstatement provided three league members indorse the application.

That any club in the league which commits acts that may bring discredit on the league can be expelled forthwith, as can club owners who associate with any "unfriendly" organization.

Aha! Gambling, Eh?

That any stockholder, player or official in the league who wagers money or any other valuable thing on the outcome of league games is expelled.

That in the final game for the league championship, the free list, with the exception of the working press, is suspended, and that each owner of the contending clubs may receive not more than four reserved seats for the game.

That players who are paid on a per game basis receive no compensation from the club in the event that a game is canceled on account of bad weather.

That verbal contracts between players and club owners will not be recognized by the league in the event of a dispute.

That any contract between player and club which is not on the regular league contract form is regarded as invalid.

That the player must set forth before witnesses at the time of the signing of his contract that he is a person of good moral character and business integrity.

Major League Leaders.

Scalzo-Dupre Bout, Postponed by Rain, On Tonight

Schmeling Arrives at Berlin

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The few Germans who greeted Max Schmeling on his arrival at the Nazi capital were surprised to see him walk off the train with his wife, Anny Ondra, the actress. They had expected Max to be on a stretcher due to his back injury suffered in his defeat by Joe Louis.

Petey Still Is Favorite Over Dupre

The comparative ability of Pete Scalzo and Tony Dupre is still unmeasured for Washington fight fans. Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn looked at the sinister skies late yesterday afternoon and postponed last night's scheduled battle at Griffith Stadium until tonight.

The postponement does not calculate to disturb the odds which still rate the Brooklyn featherweight, Scalzo, a 7 to 5 favorite over Dupre. Scalzo's impressive record of 41 victories in 42 bouts is the chief factor in the betting odds.

Matchmaker Ahearn, who has waxed enthusiastic over the prospects of a furious battle in his attempt to "sell" the fight to the Washington fistic public, points out that Dupre is an improved battler.

"Take a look," said Ahearn. "Take a look," he said, repeating himself. "Dupre's record is good, too. Eighteen wins in his last 19 fights. It is not the same Dupre who got licked by Al Reid here a few months ago, I tal' you. Now he punches good."

Ahearn also declared that his featherweight tournament to provide a suitable challenger for Champion Henry Armstrong, has been given added recognition by developments in New York.

The Joey Archibald-Mike Belloise fight, scheduled for New York this month, has been canceled and Archibald will meet the winner of the Dupre-Scalzo fight, he declared. Ahearn had accused New York promoters of attempting to hamstring his featherweight tournament by rematching Belloise and Archibald, who fought here last week.

Pete Reilly, manager of Scalzo, declared last night that his fighter was fit for tonight's match and that he anticiptated a knockout victory over Dupre. Both fighters weighed in yesterday at 125 pounds.

The preliminary card for the show remains intact with Steve Mamakos, pride of local Greeks, meeting Cal Cagney in the semifinal. The 153-pound Mamakos will have a half pound advantage over the New York welterweight. Herry Hally and Chester Ruby, of Baltimore, will mix for six rounds or less. A pair of four-rounders match Billy Banks and Bobby Brown, and Sam Bacala and Tommy Hoover.

100 Phoney Tickets Out for Fight.

Joe Turner, promoter of Washington's fistic enterprises, yesterday warned the buying public that counterfeit tickets for tonights Tony Dupre-Pete Scalzo fight are being circulated.

"All ticket buyers should ascertain that their tickets are genuine," he said. "Any ticket not purchased from regular channels may be spurious." Turner declared no arrests had been made, but that police were investigating.

Edwards Receives Boost in Salary.

Two hundred and fifty-six pounds and 6 feet 2 inches of all-American tackle returned to the Washington Redskins for the 1938 season yesterday.

Proudly flourishing the signed contract of Albert Glen (Turk) Edwards, Owner George P. Marshall of the Redskins set at rest reports that the Redskins' captain would retire from professional football.

Declaring that Edwards, captain of the Redskins, had been given a substantial increase in salary, Marshall refused to divulge the amount.

"I can only say," said Marhall, "that Edwards will be the highest-paid tackle in the history of professional football—and he deserves to be."

Edwards will report to the Redskins for training on August 10. He has been associated with the operation of a gold mine in his native State of Washington.

The big, bulky tackle, whose play last season was a tremendous factor in the Redskins' championship triumph, will next season be playing wit hthe Redskins for the seventh consecutive year. With Ernie Pinckert, he is one of the two remaining members of the Redskin team which entered National League play in 1932.

Last year Edwards was unanimously voted all-league tackle, an honor that had come to him three times before.

Edwards, now 30, earned all-American college fame at Washington State, where he played three years on the varsity at tackle after a high school career spent as a full-back. He starred in the 1930 Rose Bowl game and in that year was ranked on the all-Rose Bowl team.

Chase Faces Tigers Today

Detroit Here for Three Game Series.

Detroit's Tigers, strangely identified with the second division after four years as a pennant contender, move in on the Nats today for the start of a three-game series.

Manager Mickey Cochrane's club, 3½ games removed from the fourth-place Nats, is suffering from the same malady that has afflicted the Washington team—impotent pitching.

Today, Manager Bucky Harris will give young Ken Chase another starting chance. He will send the left-hander to the mound in an effort to cure his wildness, which has plagued him all season.

There was encouraging news for the Nats in the club doctor's report yesterday that Cecil Travis would be able to return to the Washington line-up tomorrow. Travis, who is suffering from a gashed knee, expressed the belief that he would be able to play today, but his plan was vetoed.

Despite two losses to the White Sox in the three-game series, the Nats have seven victories against three defeats to show for their ten-day home stand.

The Nats will be attempting to even the score with Detroit during the three-game series. Thus far the Tigers have won seven from the Nats and lost only four.

Hartnett's Last-Inning Single Gives Cubs Their 7th Straight

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 18.—Grinning Gabby Hartnett ran the Cubs' longest winning streak of the season to seven straight today by belting a ninth-inning single that brought home Billy Jurges with the run that beat the Boston Bees, 7 to 6.

The Bees, in the top half of the ninth, had tied the score on Tony Cuccinello's two-bagger with the bases loaded and two out.

Bobby Reis was on the mound as the Cubs came up for the last licks. Jurges drew a walk and took second on Billy Herman's sacrifice. After an intentional pass to Stanley Hack, he came rolling home as Gabby, after carrying the count to 3 and 1, dumped a looping single into short right.

Reis, the Bees' third pitcher, went only one-third of an inning and was charged with the defeat. Clay Bryant, who relieved Tex Carleton after Cuccinello's base-clearing, score-tying wallop, retired Max West, the next batter, on two pitches and thereby got credit for the victory, his eighth.

Jurges, who scored the deciding run, also scored the Cubs' first. He singled to lead off in the first and came in on Stanley Hack's triple. The Bees tied the score on two singles and an infield out in their half of the second, but the Cubs came right back with four more runs, driving Lou Fette to cover on doubles by Carleton and Hack, Herman's single, a walk, an error and a squeeze play.

F. Frick Fines Rizzo $25 for Interference

Pittsburgh, July 18 (AP).—John Rizzo, rookie outfield star of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was fined $25 today by Ford Frick, president of the National League, for what Frick termed "getting into an argument which was none of his business."

Rizzo rushed off the bench in the seventh inning of the second game between the Pirates and the New York Giants yesterday to protest a called third strike against Jim Tobin, pinch hitting for Pitcher Mace Brown.

Mrs. Melville Bell Grosvenor, of Washington, sailing the Star sloop Escape to three straight victories off Gibson Island, has captured the Fleet Captain's Trophy in the Lady Skippers' Series, principal feminine sports event of the season at the Chesapeake Bay resort. Mrs. Grosvenor finished the final race in a strong breeze. Average course length was 7 miles.

Miss Patsy McKnew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKnew, also of Washington, captured second place in the final race, sailing David Dunigan's Star sloop Wave.

Mrs. Grosvenor's cup triumph follows close on the heels of a victory by her husband in the men's elimination series for the championship of the Chesapeake Bay Fleet at Gibson Island. His achievement in sailing Escape to three firsts, a second and two fifths, among 14 contestants, gives Mr. Grosvenor the right to represent the colony in the International Star Class competition at San Diego, Calif., next December.

Also in the elimination series were two other Washingtonians, H. Worcester in Bounty and Dunigan in Wave.

Swift Saves Game; Rizzo Gets Homer

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 18.—Effective relief work by Bill Swift saved the day for the Pirates as they whipped the New York Giants today, 7 to 4, and thus took a half-game lead over the New Yorkers in the tight National League race.

Sent away to a three-run lead on Johnny Rizzo's sixth-inning home run with two on base, the Pirates slugged Dick Coffman for five hits and four more runs in the seventh, then needed Swift's best efforts to hold off Giant threats in the last two frames.

The Terrymen, held scoreless by Cy Blanton for six innings, broke the ice in the seventh with one tally on Hank Leiber's double, a single by Gus Mancuso and an infield out.

They got to Blanton for four straight singles and two runs in the eighth before he was replaced by Swift, who retired the side and let in only one more run. Mancuso opened the Giants' ninth with a double and went to third on Pinch-Hitter Lou Chiozza's single, but Swift stopped that rally dead in its tracks by fanning Hal Schumacher and Dick Bartell and forcing Jim Ripple to ground to Lee Handley.

Handley, who had singled, and Paul Waner, who had walked, were on base when Rizzo clouted his eighth four-bagger of the season. In the seventh, after Todd had opened with a double and been forced at third, singles by Young, Handley and Suhr and Lloyd Waner's two-bagger accounted for the four runs.

'Big Train' Plays, Dr. Pepper Wins

With Walter Johnson playing in right field throughout the game, the Dr. Pepper nine defeated Indianhead, 6-2, before a sizable crowd on the Indianhead field yesterday. But it must have been Walter's presence that aided, because the Big Train was unable to connect safely in four trips to the plate.

The victory was accomplished mainly through the extra base-hitting of Charlie Malone, Dutch Knepely and Tommy Steele, who hit a homer, triple and double, respectively. Dr. Pepper meets the strong Fredericksburg nine Sunday on the latter's field.

Lady Maryland, 3-2 Choice, Wins Three-Way Photo Finish at Empire

Top Weight Fails to Halt Speedy Filly

By the Associated Press.

Empire City Race Track, Yonkers, N. Y., July 18.—The Oakhill Handicap, a short 6-furlong test for class "C" horses, topped the program that ushered in the final week of the Yonkers meeting here this sultry afternoon. Lady Maryland, a gray filly that came here recommended by smart Delaware form, carried the silks of Gustavo Ring to a thrilling triumph in a three-way photo finish.

Nick Wall, who now makes a specialty of winning featured events, drove the 3-to-2 favorite up on the outside to snatch a head decision over A. D. B. Pratt's Sunport. The latter was another head better than Rosedale Stable's Lake View. Owaller and Little Miracle completed the small field as named.

Time Is Creditable.

Lady Maryland sped over a fast track in 1:09 flat under faultless handling. Carrying 117 pounds, the daughter of Sir Greysteel-Palestra was the second straight choice to make the grade.

Owaller, under Lightweight Bobby Merritt, began as if he meant to make the event a runaway affair. The filly quickly sprinted clear of her field and led by three lengths to the stretch. After turning for home she began to fade and finally dropped out of the battle. Lake View and Lady Maryland, closest on the trail, then raced head and head for the lead. Sunport, taken the overland route, closed with a belated rush that almost nipped Lady Maryland at the wire.

Gilbert Rides Winner.

Johnny Gilbert, riding sensation of the recent Delaware meeting, broke the jinx that has trailed him throughout the local session and won the first race astride Banola. It was a rather lucky triumph, however, for Snow Flurry, the second horse, and Gravilla, which finished third, both encountered bad racing luck. Banola raced Depthbomb into the ground and held on to win by a length from Snow Flurry. The latter overcame difficulties just after the start. Gravilla, beaten two lengths for the place, was blocked at the far turn and was unable to overcome the handicap. Banola, a close second choice to Gravilla, paid 7 to 5.

There Was No Fight Last Night, So Scalzo Rests

Girls' Net Tourney Will Resume Today

Quarter-final rouhd matches in the Department of Playgrounds girls' tennis tournament were postponed from yesterday until today because of rain. They will be played at Chevy Chase Playground starting at 2 p. m.

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings.

Selections at Hagerstown.

Dear Al:

Willard Root, brother of Buddy Root, will do the chief riding for Claude Feltner when he recovers sufficiently from a broken nose to climb in the saddle. Young Root is not as stocky as his older brother, but is said to be a good judge of pace and a real prospect. Hagerstown fans almost saw him in action, but Morning Flight banged him in the snoozle and the boy had to be led to the track hospital before the field got away. Mrs. Workman, mother of Sonny Workman, who rides for the Vanderbilt Stable, saw last Saturday's Hub City program. The meeting here, being resumed with the Tuesday program runs through until Saturday. Bel Air opens on Wednesday, officials of that track preferring to go through with ten straight days instead of closing the track on Mondays. Cumberland follows Bel Air, with Marlboro next and then Timonium will end the half-mile circuit. I understand the B. & O. will operate a race special from Washington to Bel Air. Neither Glowing Coals or Miss Adeline, the horses killed here last week, was insured. In answer to inquiry: Narragansett Park opens on August 1. Sorry I can't supply any badges up there. There's no truth in the rumor that Clocker Mike will make book on the Soap Box Derby. Rube Marquard, one of the big leagues' all-time pitching greats, is working in the mutuel plant at Hagerstown. John Manfuso, owner of Aneroid, pulled up slightly lame after stepping on a stone when getting out of the family car. Some of the "come-from-behind" horses which scored regularly at Charles Town are having a hard time getting up on the sharper turns here. But the customers are better than green hands and are backing the front-runners. Here's some I'm backing.

BILL.

First race—Adhelmar, prominent at Wheeling, may be the right one in the day's opener. Seems capable of giving away weight and I'm going to string alone. The entry of Blazes Bob and Lena Girl seems strong in both departments. Howellville ran forwardly at Delaware Park and is a possible surprise.

Second race—Green Water, first on the also eligible list appears nicely placed and probably will see action. Shorts will go better if the track is dry. Scout Allow is fit now and will have Palumbo to do the booting.

Third race—Shaggy Ann, on the reserve list, was in trouble in the early stages of that recent outing. I'm tossing that effort out. Halloo has worked well and should be a threat. Radial deserves consideration; off that last.

Fourth race — Chessie seems headed for a set of brackets in this field. Needs only proper handling away from the gate. Topsie H. did not like the tough going and if the course remains fast she will be in the thick of contention. Easter Herald has been patched up and may be in the money.

Fifth race—Lulu Khayyam has a lot of speed and should take the lead over this gang. Likes the route and is in light enough to last. Baldy has performed well on two occasions here and is dangerous. Quick Vine likes the track and may be a threat.

Sixth race—Justa Gal had a rough trip last out and closed with good courage. With her share of racing luck she may take the measure of these. Dun Lucky was kept on the rail in the heaviest going and was beaten last week. Dangerous if in action. Miss Epe for the show end.

Seventh race—Flying Carpet can better that last considerably and I look for a winning effort. Dunair and Canynge to take care of the other money positions.

Three Records Fall in District A. A. U. Swim Championship

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

The Round Up.

Two of the oldest axioms in golf were exemplified in major matches over the week-end, one being that they don't pay off on the drive and the other that matches are won on the putting greens.

Little Paul Runyan, the fair haired boy, was outdriven off almost every tee in the final of the P. G. A. championship at Shawnee, as sluggin' Sam Snead sent his drives whistling from 40 to 60 yards beyond Little Poison's best efforts. And where Sam needed a six iron or a niblik to the green for his second, Runyan found himself hitting with a three or five.

VIDMER.

But Runyan's longer irons were more accurate than Snead's shorter shots, and time after time Paul was inside the big, broad shouldered West Virginian. He overwhelmed Snead by 8 and 7 to capture the title for the second time and must have murmured more than once something to the effect that they certainly don't pay off on the drives.

Dizzy Business.

The return to prominence of Dizzy Dean was quite as startling in the sphere of sports as Douglas Corrigan's flight to Ireland was to the world of aviation. The Diz hadn't taken a turn in the box for ten weeks and the baseball world was practically resigned to his passing permanently from the picture.

He never would be able to pitch a decent ball game again, the wise ones observed, and many figured that he was being carried along by the Cubs, not in the hope that he ever would do them any good in the box, but because he was a nice guy to have around and amuse the players, besides providing a certain amount of publicity for the club.

"For one thing, I'm convinced that Dean is a lot older than the record books show," one baseball man said not long ago. "He's supposed to be only 27, but he's had gray hair ever since I've known him and that's been five years. After all, he never was quite sure where he came from. He told different people he was born in four or five different places, and he wasn't quite sure whether his name was Jerome Herman or Jay Hanna when he first came up. So how could he know when he was born?"

So the Diz was counted out by almost everybody around the National League and then he suddenly stepped in the box and held the Bees to four hits while winning at 3-to-1 game. Apparently there's life in the old Dean yet.

Davis Cup Stuff.

Now that we have the Davis Cup, and incidentally Don Budge, there seems to be less excitement over the international tennis situation than there has been for several years around this time of the summer. During the long stretch when the trophy remained abroad—in France and England—the United States used to get all stesmed up over the possibility of regaining it. But the defense of it apparently is taken for granted.

However, there will be a lot of new faces in the challenge round in all probability. That may cause a flutter of interest. Budge, of course, will play in three matches—two singles and one doubles. That, however, is the only certainty in regard to the American team. Bobby Riggs seems to be the most likely selection for the No. 2 singles position, but whether Gene Mako will continue to serve as Budge's doubles partner is another unsettled question.

Then, too, there's the uncertainty of the challenger. It has been taken more or less for granted that Australia will furnish the final opposition, but there are some, including Fred Perry, who has seen 'em all, who predict that Yugoslavia, of all people, will win its way into the challenge round. Perry reeled off a lot of names which he claimed belong to very fine Yugoslav tennis players, but it isn't my privilege to tell you who they are. I couldn't even pronounce them, much less attempt to spell them.

Armstrong Here.

Among the arrivals in New York over the week-end was Henry Armstrong, the dusky ruler of the featherweight and welterweight thrones, who is here to prepare for a conquest of the territory that lies in between—the lightweight division. All that stands in his way to wearing a triple crown is Lou Ambers, and the betting is 3 to 1 that the Herkimer Hurricane won't be able to withstand the attack of Armstrong.

There is little reason to figure Ambers with a chance against the man who skipped two sections of the ring realm and beat Barney Ross for the welterweight crown. But it's my guess that Armstrong will have a much more difficult time tagging Ambers than he did Ross. Ambers is a nimble stepper and fast with his fists. He is likely to do a Pastor against Homicidal Henry, leaving him looking somewhat inefficient, although easily triumphant.

Brown and Risko Tie.

Atlanta, Ga., July 18 (U.P.).—Babe Risko, 163½ pounds, former world's middleweight champion from Syracuse, N. Y. and Ben Brown, 152 pounds, Atlanta, tonight fought a ten-round draw. There were no knockdowns.

Feature Race Is Taken by Chicago Ace

Three records were broken last night as the District A. A. U. played host to more than 60 swimmers in a meet at the East Potomac Park pool.

In the 100-meter free style event, John Lumsden, 21-year-old Penn A. C. swimmer, cracked the record set in 1937 by Max Rote with a mark of 1:03.4. Rote's mark was 1:09.2. This was the first event of the program.

The feature event of the evening, the National Junior 100-meter backstroke championship, was won by Harold Henning, of the Lake Shore A. C., Chicago, in the fast time 1:13.5. The mark eclipsed by five full seconds the record set in 1937 by Ernie Boggs, who, incidentally finished third in this race.

The third record of the evening was set by Dorothy Evans, of the Penn A. C., in the 50-meter National Junior free style event, in 32.6 seconds. She finished 5 yards ahead of Doris Baugher, of the Baltimore K. of C. Placing third was Ann Bono, of the Shoreham Pool.

Henning, 22-year-old North Central College senior, is a well-known figure in and around Chicago. In college competition in North Central he holds records in the 50-yard free style (24.3); 100-yard free style (55.9); 50-yard backstroke (27.3); 100-yard backstroke (1.3).

In 1937 Henning entered the Niagara (N. Y.) Junior District A. A. U. meet and captured the backstroke in the time of 1:06, a record which stands today. The previous year, he entered the free style event, and easily won his race, although he failed to set a record. In addition to this he holds the backstroke record in the Naperville Relays with the time of 1:07.

Local entrants made out fairly well. In the 100-meter free style event for men, the Northeast Boys Club placed two men in the first four places, while James Bonham and Ernie Boggs represented the Y. M. C. A. in the pay-off positions.

The Shoreham and the Ambassador swimming clubs were well represented. Betty Strohecker, 17-year-old Roosevelt High School student, representing the Shoreham team, finished second in the 100-meter backstroke.

100-METER FREE STYLE FOR MEN—Won by John Lumsden (Penn A. C.); second, Francis Flanagan (Northeast Boys Club); third, John Bender (Y. M. C. A.). Time, 1:03.4. New record, breaking old mark of 1:09.2, set in 1937 by Max Rote.

100-METER BREAST STROKE FOR WOMEN—Won by Margaret Russell (Baltimore K. of C.); second, Lucille Kirsche (Shoreham); third, Muriel Campbell (Penn A. C.). Time, 1:41.

100-METER BREAST STROKE FOR MEN—Won by Fred Hoette (Penn A. C.); second, Arthur Hucht (Baltimore K. of C.); third, James Bonham (Y. M. C. A.). Time, 1:23.5.

100-METER BACK STROKE FOR WOMEN—Won by Dorothy Campbell (Penn A. C.); second, Betty Strohecker (Shoreham); third, Patricia Caherty (Ambassador). Time, 1:31.3.

100-METER NATIONAL JUNIOR BACK STROKE CHAMPIONSHIP FOR MEN—Won by Harold Henning (Lake Shore A. C.); second, Robert Topham (Penn A. C.); third, Ernie Boggs (Y. M. C. A.). Time, 1:13.5. New record, breaking old mark of 1:18.6, set by Ernie Boggs in 1937.

50-METER NATIONAL JUNIOR FREE STYLE FOR WOMEN—Won by Dot Evans (Penn A. C.); second, Doris Baugher (Baltimore K. of C.); third, Ann Bono (Shoreham). Time, 32:6. New record.

300-METER MEDLEY RELAY FOR MEN—Won by Penn A. C. (Topham, Hoette, Lumsden); second, Baltimore K. of C. (Pardew, Huchi, Farber). Time, 3:51.8.

Armstrong Predicts He'll Kayo Ambers.

New York, July 18 (U.P.).—Henry Armstrong expects to wrest the lightweight championship from Lou Ambers by a knockout on August 10, after the hardest fight in Henry's career.

Henry arrived yesterday from Los Angeles where for the first time he saw Ambers in action. He saw the lightweight king win a nontitle decision over Jimmy Vaughan on June 21.

"In that bout," Henry said, "Ambers indicated that he's not nearly as rugged as Barney Ross; that he doesn't take punches any too well. Vaughan staggered him. Lou didn't make Vaughan look bad until Jimmy got tired. I was a little disappointed in Ambers because I'd always heard he was such a tough fellow—one who shook off the best punches from Canzoneri, McLarnin and Montanes.

If he doesn't take my punches any better than he did Vaughan's, I'm pretty sure the fight won't go 15 rounds."

Three winners in last night's swimming meet at East Potomac Park pool are Harold Henning (left), Dot Evans (center), and Dot Campbell (right). Henning, Lake Shore A. C., Chicago, won the 100-meter national junior backstroke event. Miss Evans, Broadwood A. C., Philadelphia, won the 50-meter national junior free-style event. Dot Campbell, of the Penn A. C., Philadelphia, won the 100-meter backstroke event and broke the record for this race.

Dusek Meets Hank Barber

Meske Tackles Getz in Another Bout.

While Promoter Joe Turner is out corralling talent to participate in the "battle royal" Thursday night at Griffith Stadium, the promoter announced the booking of two supporting matches.

Headlining the card are Jack League, of Texas, and Cliff Olson, the Minnesota Swede, who will meet in one of those old-fashioned "grudge" affairs.

Signed yesterday for 30-minute bouts were Hank Barber, former Dartmouth athlete, and Wally Dusek, first cousin of Ernie, who whipped Danno O'Mahoney last Thursday in a violent upset.

Turner stated he would have only five men instead of six in the battle royal. He has drawn up a set of rules for this "royal fest."

Fights Tonight.

At Fresno, Calif., Young Corbett, Fresno, vs. Glen Lee, Edison, Nebr., middleweights, 10.

Wilmer Allison Wins Opening Round in Brookline Net Play

Texas Champion Defeats Charles Cole; Fourth-Seeded Frank Kovacs Also Moves Ahead.

By the Associated Press.

Brookline, Mass., July 18.—The rain that slowed down most of the major tennis tournaments this season caught up with the tourists again today, but four of the Longwood Bowl field, including two of the seeded players, managed to complete first-round matches between showers.

Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., last year's winner, sped through Charles J. Cole, of Hartford, Conn., for a 6—1, 6—0 victory, while seventh seeded Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., eliminated his townsman, Harold Hudson, 6—0, 6—1.

Before the early starters were driven from the courts, Sanford Webster, of West Point, N. Y., found time to defeat James Roberts, of Brookline, 6—0, 6—1, and William Winslow, Princeton, N. J., eliminated Paul Hurley, of Quincy, 6—3, 7—5.

When play was suspended, second seeded Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, led L. W. Crossman, New York, 6—0, 3—0, while Sydney Wood, of New York, seeded fifth, was all even after two sets with Al Jarvis, of Williamstown. Jarvis won the first, 6—4, and Wood the second at 6—2.

Seeded Net Stars Beaten in Tourney

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 18.—Seeded players in the Eastern Clay Court Tennis championships traveled a rough road today at the Jackson Heights Tennis Club, two of them losing at the nets, two others withdrawing, and a fifth being extended to the limit before winning his match.

The first jolt to the favorites' ranks came when Julius Heldman, of Los Angeles, seeded sixth, bowed to Eddie Degray, of Brooklyn, a former North Carolina U. star, 6—3, 6—4. Heldman, runner-up to Frank Guernsey in the State clay court championships, blew 2—0 and 3—1 game advantages.

A second upset followed this. J. Gilbert Hall, the veteran New Yorker who was seeded fourth, was eliminated by Percy Kynaston, of Brooklyn, another veteran, 2—6, 6—4, 6—0.

Frank Guernsey, jr., of Orlando, Fla., the national intercollegiate and State clay court titlist, whipped John Brauback, San Antonio, 6—1, 6—2. Frank X. Shields, the New Yorker who became a movie star, breezed through two rounds, whipping Sam Stewart, of New York, 6—1, 6—1, and Leonard Straus, another New Yorker, 6—2, 6—0. Guernsey is seeded fifth and Shields third.

Barney Welsh Tops West Virginia Event

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 18.—Forty-one tennis players fretted today as heavy rains held up opening of play in the annual State amateur open tennis tournament.

Pairings in the men's division follow: Barney Welsh, Ed Morton; Wright Hugus, Wheeling; R. N. Brown, Elkins; Eddie Blickle, Huntington; Stanley Lewis, Cincinnati; Harry Pugh, New York; Fred West, Lynchburg, Va.; Paul Kunkel, Shane; Marcus Lopin, New York; Elmer Rudy, Baltimore; Talbert; Walter S. Pawluk, Detroit, Mich.; Anthony Jablonski, Detroit; Charles Front, Wheeling; Robinson; John Gray, Charleston, and Robert Shanklin, Ashland, Ky., all drew byes.

W. R. Ruxton, Cincinnati, vs. Andrew Christian, Richmond; Deacon Parsons, Huntington vs. Pell Miller, Charleston; C. Yeras, Detroit, vs. Joe Scherr, jr., Cincinnati; Herbert Stansbury, Beckley, vs. James Quinn, Beckley; Dewitt Smith, Washington, vs. George Mahood, Bluefield.

Murray Ten to Play.

The Murray Construction Co. softballers will meet the Argyle A. C. tomorrow on the Johnson School Playground, for second place in the Fourteenth Street Businessmen's League.

Coach Joe Murray will send his ace pitcher, Marty Corbett to the mound against the strong Argyle club. White or Nocera will oppose him. The Murray team would like to arrange games with teams having diamonds. Phone Tony Neri at Adams 2901 before 6 p. m.

Larkin Wins Pro Sweeps

Al Houghton, McNally First in Pro-Amateur.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Gene Larkin, Woodmont Club professional, played the last nine holes at Hillendale yesterday in 31 strokes, 4 under par, and tacked it to an outgoing 36 for a 67 and the winning score in the pro-sweepstakes event of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament.

Larkin's 4 under par score was a shot better than the 68's posted by George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood mentor; Johnny Bass, Clifton Park pro, and Andy Gibson, Bonnie View.

The pro-amateur was played without handicaps for the first time this year and won by Al Houghton, Old Point Comfort, Va., pro, and Felix McNally, Clifton Park amateur, who paired a best ball of 63, eight shots under perfect figures.

Houghton had an individual 69 and McNally helped by six shots.

Erford G. Barnes, the host city's most consistent amateur winner in these events, had two partners, Bass and Gibson, and finished second with each as he aided their sub-par 68's by three shots each.

Larkin and his three partners finished in a six-way tie for the last money prize in the pro-am, with 66's, as each of his partners, Jerry Brode, Woodmont; H. Marx, Hillendale, and J. F. O'Hara, jr., Hillendale, could cut only a single stroke off his score.

The others at 66 included Houghton and P. W. Calfee, Washington, and Bass and Gibson, with Spencer Overton, Rolling Road's State amateur finalist.

Four other District professionals competed but finished out of the money with their amateurs. Leo Walper, unattached, had 70; Mel Shorey, East Potomac, 71; Tony Sylvester, Capital, 76, and Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, no card. Fifteen pros and 39 amateurs competed.

Larkin's streak started on the ninth hole where he hit the pin with his tee shot, the ball missing an ace only by inches, and then rolling 2 feet away. He missed the putt for a deuce but holed four sizable birdie attempts on the back nine for the 31 and 67.

Giles Wats Hurler To "Cash In."

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 18 (U.P.).—No-hit, no-run Johnny Vander Meer must have 50 per cent of the earnings from stories written about him, General Manager Warren Giles, of the Cincinnati Reds, announced today.

Giles, who said he intends to see that Vander Meer gets his due, insisted that he will not "get a single penny for looking after the matter" for the youthful pitcher who pitched himself to fame.

"I'm looking after those affairs so that everyone won't be riding on Vander Meer's wagon for profit," Giles told a correspondent who wanted to interview the hurler.

Additionally, Giles said, orphanages obtaining autographed baseballs from Vander Meer for raffling purposes must pay for the contribution.

1-Ball Event At Columbia On Thursday

Tourney Will Be Played on Handicap Basis; Other Events.

A one-ball, selective drive tournament will be played at Columbia on Thursday, another event on the extensive schedule of the Maryland State Golf Association.

The tourney will be played on a handicap basis, with each team allotted one-half of the combined handicap of the two players. The duos will play alternate shots and selective drives.

Contestants must have an M. S. G. A. handicap card. The entrance fee for the tourney is $1, and partners will be available on the first tee.

AMATEURS PLAY.

An 18-hole medal play handicap event is carded today at the Fountain Head Club in Hagerstown. The usual $1 entrance fee of Maryland State Golf Association events and a State handicap card are the only requirements.

Merchandise prizes will be awarded.

PROS IN BENEFIT.

Two exhibition matches, one in the city and another in Baltimore, are planned by the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. within the next two months for the benefit of Warner Mather, former pro at Rodgers Forge and Woodholme, in Baltimore.

The first is scheduled at a local club with the tentative date September 25, and the other at Woodholme, October 2.

The sectional body solicited merchandise from manfacturers and will use it for prizes in the form of lucky numbers on the tickets of the spectators. Tickets will be $1 apiece.

Golf writers from the respective cities will select the players for the three four-ball matches.

TRADE TOURNEY.

The annual tournament of the Washington Trade Association executives is carded for Burning Tree on Thursday, July 21, at 18 holes.

Prizes include first and second low net and gross, blind bogey, low putts and others. The main trophy will be for the low net score among the selective handicaps, although anything under 67 will be void.

Printers Event.

The Union Printers International Golf Association tournament starts Monday, August 1, over the Edgewood Country Club in Pittsburgh.

The tourney for the Printer golfers, second largest golf association in the country, is a four-day, 72-hole medal play event, played in flights.

A second Walter Hagen trophy, the first was retired last year as Edward Gableman won the event for the third time, in Baltimore has been donated for the winner.

The largest entry list in history is expected as applications for entries have been received from every section of the country. The dates are August 1 through 4, with a practice round on July 30. The wives will also play in a tourney on August 2 for the McLaughlin trophy.

Lou Blue's Best Busy.

Lou Blue, former big leaguer, who is operating a baseball school at Ballston, Va., has selected a nine from his choice pupils, and this aggregation is scheduled to meet the Ballston Athletic Club team Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the Ballston Stadium.

Buckingham Paces W. & L. Golf Event

Donald Buckingham, with a gross 81 from nines of 41 and 40, paced the Woodward & Lothrop employes tournament for the Trustees Cup yesterday at Indian Spring, with Buddy Harris next with 85. The event will be concluded today.

Harris, with 85, 12—73, had the lowest net score, followed by William Rhees, 96, 20—76, and Buckingham, Columbia Country Club golfer, 81, 4—77.

Sandlot Pickups

Hurling highlights: . . . This young fellow Johnny Vander Meer, of big league no-hit, no-run fame, really started something when he hung up his impressive record several weeks ago . . . If you don't believe this, just peep at the following achievements made by sandlot mound workers last Sunday . . . Barton Scribner, Mulhall Athletic Club twirler, chucked a no-hit, no-run game to give his nine a 5-0 win over Gibson Grays . . . Only two men reached first base, one on an error, the other on a walk.

• • • •

Charlie Kendall, Blue Ribbon Bakery hurler, pitched a no-hit, no-run tilt to carry his team to the first half title in the National City Midget League . . . Charlie struck out eight and never walked a man as he registered his sixth straight victory in downing the No. 4 Police Boy's Club team, 9-0. By the way, the Bakery lads are practically the same team that won the Insect championship in the sixth annual Columbian Athletic League Basemall Tournament.

• • • •

And even though these are not no-hit, no-run engagements, they are mound exhibitions you don't see every day in the week . . . Freddie Leaman went to the box in the fourth inning to relieve the starting pitcher and proceeded to strike out 14 opponents, not allowing a run or giving a hit during the last five stanzas . . . And his chums, the District Plumbers, came through with a 5-to-4 triumph over the Pirates . . . Hurling is the subject matter, but it would be a crime not to mention the fact that Leaman smashed a single with the bases full to capture his own battle.

J. Groskerth gave up just one meager hit as he winged the Michigan Athletic Club nine to a 12-to-1 victory over the Clark Juniors . . . William Fisher allowed but three hits, having a no-hit, no-run performance until the beginning of the eighth, as the St. Jasper squad nipped Pepco, 1 to 2, in an American Legion encounter . . . Kenneth Usiliton fanned 15, gave up two hits and walked only four to give the Michigan Park Orioles a 7-to-2 win over Fogleman's Radio . . . Arthur Faircloth, No. 11 Police Boys Club slab ace, pitched three-hit ball against the Boulevar Heights nine . . . His team won, 18 to 6 . . . R. Downs, hurler for the Ida Department Store aggregation, was nipped for a lone single as the Takoma Cardinals were stopped, 12 to 0 . . . He also slammed a homer with two men on, to aid in capturing his own victory . . . Attention: Professional baseball . . . The sandlots of Washington are sending up pitchers.

Wheat Prices Higher With Securities Rise

Advances Despite Big Increase in Visible Supply.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 18.—Stimulated by run-ups of securities, Chicago wheat values scored fractional net gains today, despite a big increase of the United States wheat visible supply.

Enlargement of the visible supply amounted to 21,801,000 bushels, against 13,682,000 bushels increase a week ago, and almost equaled last year's all-time record increase at this period. Late jumps of securities, however, were more than an offset.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛-⅝ higher compared with Saturday's finish, September, 70-70⅛; December, 71¾-71⅞. Corn also ⅛-⅝ up; September, 60⅛-60¼; December, 59⅜. Oats varying from ⅛ decline to ¾ advance. Rye unchanged to ⅛ climb, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents lower.

Cotton Higher; Oct. 8.62 Cents

New York, July 18 (AP).—Cotton received increased support late today following early losses due to favorable weather and crop advices. December, which had eased from 8.67 to 8.56, recovered to 8.70, closing at the high for the day. Final prices were 2 to 4 points net higher.

The opening market was influenced by indifferent action at Liverpool and generally favorable weather in the cotton belt over the week-end. Tired long liquidation appeared and prices sold off to net losses of 9 to 12 points.

Below 8½ cents for October, however, buying orders at limits were uncovered and offerings dried up. The trade bought moderately and contracts became scarce in the last half hour. Late strength of the stock market influenced late buying.

Futures Price Range.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was steady early on further covering, but eased later under Southern selling and liquidation, influenced by the easier lard market. Final prices were 4 to 6 points net lower. Sales, 77 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; September closed at 8.70, October, December and January, 8.70, March, 9.73.

Business Loans Up $5,000,000 for Week

The Federal Reserve Board said banks in 101 leading cities increased their business loans by $5,000,000. This was the second increase in three weeks after a period of 21 weeks of consecutive decreases.

MortgageLoans Not a Burden Says Fleming

Only Two Staff Members Needed for Over 300 FHA Loans.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Writing in the current issue of Insured Mortgage Portfolio, official publication of the Federal Housing Administration, President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank, explains that addition of a substantial mortgage lending business to a commercial bank's normal activities need not involve great difficulties, marked readjustments, or undue expense. Although residential mortgage lending under the national housing act presented some unfamiliar problems to his institution, it obtained approval as a mortgagee early in the operations of the Federal Housing Administration.

Up to that time, the bank had made mortgage loans only in limited number as accommodations to old customers and had not developed a specially trained personnel. The question was whether the bank could devise a system for making and handling insured mortgage loans which would fit smoothly into its operations without much additional expense. The best evidence of its success in meeting this problem lies in the fact that only two staff members are required for handling more than 300 FHA-insured loans, totaling upward of $2,200,000, made to date, Mr. Fleming reminds.

"The fact of FHA insurance," he says, "saves us from any possible complications growing out of the management of foreclosed properties, though in this connection I should add that we have no foreclosures to date nor any major collection difficulties."

Riggs Lending System.

The Riggs system of mortgage lending is based on the use of facilities available through existing specialized agencies in the local field, rather than on the setting up of similar facilities within the bank itself. Thus the bank keeps to its main function of extending credit and retains qualified outside agencies to attend to the more technical details peculiar to residential mortgage loans.

"In organizing the system," Mr. Fleming explains, "we arranged with a local company, which had had extensive experience as a mortgage loan correspondent for a large life insurance company, to make the appraisals and inspections of properties offered as mortgage security. Our plan at first was to have this company service our loans as well. We later revised this arrangement and arrived at our present plan of having this company simply make the appraisal and, in the case of construction loans, periodic inspections, paying them a flat fee for this work and taking over the servicing of the loans ourselves.

"In addition, we arranged with several title companies—since we intended to operate in nearby Maryland and Virginia, as well as the District of Columbia—to assume charge of title searches, surveys, disbursements and final closings.

New York, July 18.—The stock market made an effort today to break out of the narrow range that has encompassed it for the last two weeks and it was largely successful. Although the composite average for the stock list did not surpass its former best price, the close was higher than for any previous close in the current recovery movement. And at their best, prices were near the highs touched on the two recent bulges. The composite average reached 104.35 today against 104.37 made on the July 13 bulge and the year's high of 104.60 made on July 7.

The net advance measured about three-quarters point and it was cheering to the bullish forces that the greatest activity came on the upside. The market opened higher and then tapered off in very light trading. Prices firmed again at noon, but the most convincing upsurge did not come until the beginning of the final hour. Trading hit a fast pace in this period and at one time the ticker was two minutes late in reporting quotations.

High Closing Good Omen.

The fact that the market had a new closing high was hailed by the bullish forces as a good omen for tomorrow. They saw in this technical point a possibility that the list will be able to break away from the trading range of the last two weeks. Trading amounted to 1,557,330 shares and most of the active issues carried plus signs at the close. A total of 146 issues reached new highs for 1938 and none made new lows.

Steel Output Aids.

The bullish report on steel operations was a factor in the strength which developed in the latter part of the trading session. For this week the industry expects to be on a basis of 36.4 per cent of its capacity, which is the best it has shown in eight months. It compares with 32.3 per cent last week and 28.0 per cent a month ago. There has as yet been no great response to the recent price reductions, but sentiment has improved and the companies expect orders to increase. The first rail order for third quarter delivery has been let.

As on recent trading days, there were a number of cases of large blocks of stocks changing hands, particularly at the opening. Chrysler opened with 1,200 shares, up a point, and steel was up ¾ on a thousand shares. General Motors also opened with 1,000 shares and Anaconda started the day with 2,000, up a half. Throughout the day there were periods when relatively large blocks appeared on the ticker.

General Motors Active.

Early strength in the baking shares did not hold too well and the Continental issues, which were at their highs early in the day, closed with minus signs. The most active issue of the day was General Motors, which closed up 1¼. Chrysler added 2¾ and Yellow Truck was firm. United States Rubber, Goodyear and Goodrich were well supported, the first named closing up 2¾. United States Steel was a leader in its division, its late strength coming on the announcement of higher operations for the week. It closed up 2¼, while Bethlehem was up 1⅝. Anaconda led the metals with a gain of 1⅛. R. K. O., on the basis of approval of its reorganization plan, Paramount and Spiegel broke into the list of most active stocks.

Late strength in securities did much for commodities, helping to turn early losses into slight gains. Wheat was low at the beginning on the increase in the United States visible supply but at the close futures were up ⅛ to ⅝, largely because of the sympathetic buying based on the rally in stocks. Cotton was off 9 to 12 points early but the combination of complaints of boll weevil damage and the stock rally brought about a net advance of 2 to 4 points.

Rail Bonds Strong.

Moderate strength in the rail section, particularly for speculative issues, was the best feature of the bond market on the Stock Exchange today. With volume continuing limited in most groups, price movements were small and the averages for 30 bonds closed fractionally higher than the preceding day.

Treasuries Easier.

Taken by groups, treasuries were inclined to be easier for the more active issues, declines ranging up to about 3-32, while utility bonds also sagged. Industrials were about steady and the foreign section mixed. Among the latter there were declines in Czech and German obligations while Japanese bonds lacked uniform movement.

Local transit bonds closed steady within narrow changes from the previous close while other utilities such as consolidated Edison and Penn Power sold off.

In the rail group there were some notable gains particularly among the bonds of Mobile & Ohio, Great Northern, Chicago & North Western and Southern Pacific. The movement here corresponded with strength in rail stocks.

Home Construction Shows Sharp Gain

New York, July 18 (AP).—The value of homes constructed to be lived in by their owners rose sharply in the first six months of 1938 to the highest level in several years, F. W. Dodge, building statisticians, reported today.

The survey indicated half the residential building volume last month was for owner occupancy. The proportion has increased steadily from January, when only one-third of the total was accounted for by owner occupancy contracts. June, 1937, stood at 40 per cent of the total.

The six months expansion tripled the volume of such building, the total rising from $12,600,000 in January to $40,900,000 in June. Owner occupancy building in the latter month was some $2,500,000 above the comparable period last year although total residential construction was somewhat smaller.

Atlas Must Protect R.-K.-O. Reorganization

New York, July 18 (AP).—Atlas Corporation, an investing company, must agree in writing to underwrite new Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation stock proposed by the former company in a reorganization plan for the latter, Special Master George W. Alger ruled today. Atlas Corporation owns R-K-O securities in excess of $2,000,000.

Alger will make three other changes in the plan, which he said he will submit to Federal Judge William Bondy. They are (1) that both classes of stock, preferred and common, have cumulative voting privileges; (2) that present debenture holders be entitled to one share of preferred and five of common, or they may take one and four-tenths of a share of preferred for each $100 debenture held; (3) before issuing new debentures, the corporation must obtain consent of 50 per cent of the preferred stockholders.

Nickel Plate Road Seeks Extension

Cleveland, July 18 (AP).—Nickel Plate Railroad, important 1,705-mile link in the Chesapeake & Ohio system, next week will ask holders for a three-year extension of its $15,000,000 issue of 6 per cent unsecured notes, due October 1, railroad circles said today.

In 1932 and 1935 C. & O. bought dissenters' notes totaling $3,583,750, but it is believed unwilling to spend much more to gain another extension for its "little sister." If the line defaulted it might be forced into reorganization.

Directors of both roads meeting here tomorrow are expected to take formal action, to be announced when plans are ready for submission to the holders.

209,668 'Lost' Persons Found; 16,141 Sought

Only 16,141 out of 225,809 persons reported missing last year in the United States remain unfound, according to figures made public yesterday by the Department of Justice. At the same time 2,603 of 11,202 who were unknown at the time of death were reported still unidentified.

Persons identified by the Federal Bureau of Investigation included flood victims, suicides and vagrants, as well as criminals and amnesia sufferers.

The estimates, based on a survey conducted by the F. B. I., disclosed there were 2,158 amnesia victims among those reported missing. All but 118 of the amnesia sufferers were identified either through medical treatment or F. B. I. fingerprints.

In a statement describing as "astounding" the number of persons unknown at the time of death, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau, urged honest law-abiding citizens to have their fingerprints filed in his agency as an infallible means of identification in case of emergency.

By searching the files of the F. B. I. last year identities of 1,129 of the 11,202 instances of unknown deceased persons were revealed.

Since establishment in 1933 of the civil identification section, 830,000 citizens have availed themselves of the service as a means of insuring their identity "against catastrophe or disaster which is liable to occur in the most routine walks of life," Hoover said.

400 Holders Split $250,000 Cash for Shoreham Notes

Some 400 noteholders who were holding old notes of the Shoreham Office Building when the real estate brokerage firm of Swartzell, Rhem & Hensey went into bankruptcy, will share, beginning today, in the distribution of about $250,000.

Attorneys Marcus Borchardt and Arthur P. Drury, appointed trustees of the fund after the United States Court of Appeals had partially reversed a decision of the District Court, said the fund originally amounted to $176,039.99, but that accrued interest made up the difference.

But for an appeal taken by the estate of Clarence B. Rheem, which held thousands of dollars of notes of the Shoreham Buiding, located at Fifteenth and H streets northwest, the entire amounts would have been paid out. Those now being paid are among the number who got neither cash nor other bonds for their notes on the Shoreham Building just prior to collapse of the Swartzell firm, which had financed its erection.

Others, it developed, had received cash for their notes or had accepted other bonds.

Justice Watches 'Claw' Machine, Rules It Gambling

After seeing what a "claw" machine can do, the United States Court of Appeals, in a decision by Justice Stephens yesterday upheld the District Court findings that the machines were gambling devices and not games of skill.

Three claw machines, taken from a store operated by Mrs. Freda Boosalis, were used as a test case. In District Court they were held to be games of chance and their return to the owners, who had asked a writ of replevin, was denied.

The Appellate Court held ". . . in respect to a player operating a machine according to directions, the evidence was uncontroverted that except to the extent that he could, by locator-handle, suspend the claw in the vicinity of the desired article, the operation of the machine was beyond his control.

"It was further uncontroverted that even if the claw was suspended immediately over the article, there are chances that the claw may not strike the article . . . that if it does strike the article it may not grip the article, or having gripped the article that it may slip off before reaching the chute, or may be knocked off by some other articles in the way."

'New-Animal' Makes Debut At Smithsonian

15-Ton Titanosour Pieced Together 90,000,000 Years Later.

A "brand new animal" made its debut in Washington yesterday. It's new, that is, in terms of geologic time.

Actually the 15-ton titanosaur whose bones Paleontologist Charles W. Gilmore is piecing together at the Smithsonian Institution is about 90,000,000 years old.

Dr. Gilmore explained that the beastie is just a youngster to him, because it roamed the plains of central Utah several million years after other members of the dinosaur family died out. It's new also because it is the first of its species ever found in North America.

Dr. Charles W. Gilmore busy examining a foreleg of the titanosour.

Dr. Gilmore bases his estimate of its weight on the 9-foot foreleg he and his associates dug up last summer. Judging from the tail bones he found, the monster's body must have been 120 feet long, its tail extending 50 feet beyond that.

The bones, representing two-thirds of the animal's skeleton, arrived from Utah packed in burlap bags which had been dipped in plaster of paris. The trick is to peel off the burlap and plaster without breaking the skeleton beneath.

Once clear of wrapping, the bone fragments must be fitted together like a jigsaw puzzle and glued. "It takes patience," Dr. Gilmore admitted. "In fact, our wives complain we use up all our patience down here.

Other titanosaurs have been located in India, Madagascar, France and South America. Their wide distribution indicates they exercised a world-wide dictatorship over smaller beasts in their day.

Paleontologists figure the titanosaurs might still be ruling were it not for their colossal appetites. The theory is that the food supply ran out.

Jury Indicts Cafe Man for Killing Friend

J. P. Cullinane, Charged in Stabbing, Cleared by Coroner's Jury.

Although cleared by a coroner's jury of the fatal stabbing of Angelo Theodore Pappas, John J. Cullinane, restaurant owner, 801 Third street northwest, yesterday was indicted by the District Grand Jury on a charge of manslaughter.

According to grand jury testimony, Cullinane and Pappas, erstwhile close friends, had a falling out when Cullinane announced that he had obtained a job in the District service and was going to close his restaurant. That meant throwing Pappas out of work.

As Pappas, enraged, rushed at Cullinane, the latter stabbed him with a knife. Pappas died at Sibley Hospital. Cullinane denied any intention of hurting his friend, saying, he merely had wished to scare him.

Others indicted: John A. Hocking, nonsupport; Richard F. McCoy, Joseph Lane, James A. Westray, Paul Leon Johnson and Maurice Middleton, joyriding; Charles R. Boone, Ulysses B. Washington, housebreaking; James A. Gestray, Charles Reynolds, Clarence Harrison, George Calavetinos, James McGowan, William F. McCracken, Rachel Harper and Alvin I. Halpern, grand larceny.

Abe Medeoy, Richard A. Jennings, Samuel A. Prather, Columbus Marshall, Henry Neal, Theodore I. Davis, Thomas Marshall, Morris Kapplean, Russell E. Young, Lawrence Mavromatis, Robert Davis, Asbury Williams and Clarence Harrison, robbery; Maurice M. Hawkins, joyriding; Albert and Robert Kirk, rape; George K. Flynn, Lacy L. Armstrong, Hade Threatt, Clayton Threatt, Cecil Fisher, Lawrence L. Hawkins, William H. Day and William Frazier, assault with a dangerous weapon.

Army, Navy Plan Parts In Next Year Air Races

The Army and Navy will participate in the National Air Races at Cleveland, Ohio, next September, it was learned yesterday.

"The Air Corps will present a varied program both in the air and in its ground exhibit," Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said.

The Navy's part "will consist of one 18-plane fighting squadron now attached to the U. S. S. Yorktown, and one 18-plane Marine Corps fighting squadron attached to Aircraft One, Fleet Marine Force, Quantico, Va., together with such transport planes and ground crews as may be required," stated Rear Admiral A. P. Fairfield, acting Chief of Naval Operations.

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, Executive Office, Washington, July 11, 1938. ORDERED: That Article XXVI of the Police Regulations of the District of Columbia, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following new sections, to be known as Sections 10(a) and 10(b): Sec. 10(a). Every tank wagon, truck, or other vehicle bearing or containing motor vehicle fuel, kerosene or motor oil for delivery in the District of Columbia shall have displayed thereon in a conspicuous place on the sides of each such tank wagon, truck or vehicle, the name and address of the owner or owners of said vehicle or vehicles, printed or painted in letters not less than four inches high. Every operator or other person in charge of every such tank wagon, truck, or vehicle shall have in his possession at the time a true invoice or ticket showing in ink or other indelible substance in liquid measure the net weight or gallonage of each such motor fuel, kerosene, or motor oil, together with the name and address of the purchaser, and the name and address of each person, firm or corporation from whom or which purchased. No person shall transport for delivery in the District of Columbia, any motor vehicle fuel, kerosene, or motor oil in any tank wagon, truck, or other vehicle which is not marked as above provided, and no person shall so transport or deliver, nor shall any person in charge permit to be so transported or delivered any motor vehicle fuel, kerosene, or motor oil in any such tank wagon, truck or other vehicle, who does not have in his possession the true invoice or ticket provided for in this Section. Upon demand of any member of the Metropolitan Police Force on the person in charge of any such tank wagon, truck or other vehicle, or the operator or driver thereof, he shall exhibit the invoice or ticket herein for inspection: Provided, That no such invoice or ticket shall be required for tank wagons or vehicles operating under vendors' licenses provided for by the License Law of July 1, 1932, or engaged in making deliveries outside of the District of Columbia, but the burden so to show shall be upon the person in charge or the operator or driver of any such tank wagon, truck or other vehicle. Sec. 10(b). All retail dealers shall retain invoices or memoranda of all sales, purchases, or deliveries of motor fuel, kerosene and motor oil for a period of 60 days from date of sale or delivery to them, and the same shall be open to inspection during business hours of the day during this period. EXTRAORDINARY BARGAIN!
AFTER YOU HAVE INSPECTED THIS HOUSE, YOU WILL AGREE WITH US IT IS THE MOST UNUSUAL VALUE YOU EVER SAW. And you will probably say, "How could the owner afford to offer this much house for the money?" So we will tell you about the builder, who literally lost his shirt, and how the trustees foreclosed. That is a story about a center-hall brick Colonial featuring bedroom and lavatory on first floor in addition to large living room, dining room and kitchen, and 3 master bedrooms and 2 baths on second floor. The location is ideal, only 10 blocks to school and 2 blocks to shopping center.

Life's Darkest Moment

Bob Burns Says—

Nowadays you hear so many people kickin' about the high taxes, but I don't know where in the world a man'd go to escape 'em. A lot'a poor people ain't makin' any money at all and when a man is lucky enough to have a good income, he oughta be glad for the privilege of payin' taxes on it.

I knew a man out here in California that made a lot of money and he was always kickin' about havin' to pay taxes so he picked up and moved to a little town in the Middle West. The second day he was there, his wife was fined $2 for parkin' the baby buggy too close to a fire plug and the baby was fined 10 cents amusement tax for suckin' its thumb.

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — One Step Beyond — By Frank Martinek

WINSLOWGRAM
SPYCRAFT HAS DEVELOPED INGENIOUS DEVICES AND METHODS TO EXTRACT INFORMATION FROM INFORMANTS. SOME ARE SUBTLE. OTHERS ARE CRUDE AND BRUTAL. TODAY WINSLOW GOES A STEP BEYOND SCORPIA'S OWN DEVICES TO BREAK DOWN ONE OF IT'S AGENTS-
THERE'S NO VIOLENCE CONNECTED WITH THESE CONDITIONING CELLS, CHIEF- IT'S MENTAL TORTURE- IT GET'S RESULTS SLOWLY
BUT YOU SAY YOU'RE PLANNING TO GO A STEP FARTHER?
THAT'S IT- I'M FIGURING ON LETTING HIM TORTURE HIMSELF-
-AND THE THEME OF OUR LITTLE PLOT WILL BE -POISON GAS-

DIXIE DUGAN — Plunk! — By J. P. McEvoy and H. I. Striebel

I HOPE THE CAR DOESN'T BREAK DOWN AGAIN, DARLING - I CAN HARDLY WAIT 'TILL YOU GET HERE!
LET'S GO!
WE CAN'T YET, MICHAEL! "FOXY" RAN INTO THE WOODS!
GOSH, UNCLE PHIL - I TOLD JA TO HOLD HIM!
AW - STOP SQUAWKIN'! - HE'LL BE BACK IN A MINUTE!

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics — By Bob Zuppke, Famous Football Coach.

WHY DOES IT JUST STAND THERE AND BORE US WITH ITS EYES? A DOG WOULDN'T DO THAT I'M GOING TO SPEAK TO IT AND SEE WHAT IT DOES
PUT THE GUN DOWN - HE'S AFRAID OF IT
BUT SUPPOSING IT IS A WOLF
COME ON, BOY - COME OVER AND GET ACQUAINTED
IT STILL LOOKS MORE LIKE A WOLF TO ME KNOW WHAT THIS MEANS, BUD?
IT MEANS THAT UNLESS IT IS AS LOST AS WE ARE, WE'LL GET OUT OF THESE WOODS ALIVE!

Hopkins' Aide, Milford, 55, Dies Suddenly

Nationally Known Editor Succumbs From Heart Ailment.

Morton Milford, 55, special assistant to Works Progress Administrator Harry Hopkins and a nationally known Washington correspondent and newspaper editor for more than 25 years, died suddenly last night in his home at 305 Raymond street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Mr. Milford yesterday notified his office at the WPA, where he was in charge of press relations, that he wasn't feeling well and would not be at work. At 2 p. m. he called a physician, who prescribed at rest. He was found dead in bed of a heart ailment and hemorrhage by a maid at 5:30 p. m.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Florence Moffett Milford; a 10-year-old son, Arthur Lee Milford, and his mother, Mrs. Harriet Milford, of Chicago.

He was born at Lafayette, Ind., the son of the late Dr. Arthur B. Milford, a classmate of President Wilson at Princeton University, and for 32 years was professor of English language and literature at Wabash College, Crawfordville, Ind.

Mr. Milford began his newspaper career on the Indianapolis Sentinel shortly after graduating from Wabash College in 1904. He later became a member of the editorial staff of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal. He came to Washington as correspondent for the Indianapolis News before taking charge of the news bureau here of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times.

He was for a time owner and publisher of the Fort Myers (Fla.) Press, but left newspaper work during the Cox-Harding campaign to assist William Cochran, then publicity director for the Democratic National Committee.

At one time he was editor and managing editor of Gov. Cox's Miami Daily News where he directed the publication of the world's largest daily newspaper edition, a 504-page issue in observance of Miami's twenty-seventh anniversary.

In 1930 he abandoned newspaper work for public relations. In May, 1933, he was placed in charge of press relations for the Emergency Relief Administration, holding a similar position with the old Civil Works Administration.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Rudolph Ganz conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Monday night at the Potomac Watergate in the third summer concert, with Jan Peerce, tenor, as soloist. Program: Overture to "Oberon" (Weber), Symphony No. 1 in C major (Beethoven), "Rachel, quand du Seigneur" from "La Juive" (Halevy), Prelude to "Lohengrin" (Wagner), Ballet Suite from "Le Cid" (Massenet), "To lo sai" (Torelli), "Morning" (Speaks), "Kaiser Walzer" (Strauss), "Slavonic March" (Chaikovski).

In a contest of perseverance between the National Symphony Orchestra and Jupiter Pluvius, the former proved its staying power last night by playing to the end the program postponed from Sunday, although a light rain fell persistently for the first hour. An audience of several thousand complimented Rudolph Ganz, the guest conductor, by defying the drizzle and according him the welcome which he deserved. Raised umbrellas were considerably in evidence, and those not forearmed protected themselves with capes and hats extemporized from newspapers.

Good humor prevailed in the crowd, and the applause showed no dampening of enthusiasm. The cessation of the rain would have allowed the musicians to rest during the usual intermission, but Mr. Ganz decided to take no chances, and conducted the concert without a break. The faithful listeners thus received the full measure of music and even an extra number at the end—the fifth Hungarian Dance of Brahms.

Mr. Ganz began his pleasant program with Weber's overture to "Oberon," the fairy opera which was the composer's last gift to the stage, as he died barely two months after its premiere in London. His imaginative romanticism reached its fine flower in this music which retains its magical power of evocation. The overture was followed by Beethoven's first symphony, that genial work in which his individuality impressed itself upon symphonic style while paying reverence to Haydn and Mozart.

Jan Peerce, the soloist of the evening, made his local debut in the aria, "Rachel, quand du Seigneur la grace tutelaire," from Halevy's "La Juive," which he intoned with vigorous declamation. His voice has resonance and ample volume, although the tone is not as steady as might be desired. His reading exaggerated the Italian style of histrionic emotion, and his breathing did not always respect the integrity of phrases. Upon his recall he responded with Leoncavallo's "Mattinata."

At his second appearance he contributed to the program two lyrics: Torelli's familiar "Tu lo sai" and Oley Speaks' "Morning." In both these songs his tendency to dramatic stress overweighted the melodic lines. To the applausive request for more he acceded with "La donn' e mobile."

The absence of an intermission brought into sharp contrast the etheral soarings of the prelude to "Lohengrin" and the lively materiality of Massenet's ballet music from "Le Cid." Massenet's handling of Spanish themes is not without indebtedness to Bizet in the application of color. The last two works on the program were tried and true selections from the standard repertoire: the "Kaiser" waltz by Johann Strauss, and Chaikovski's "Slavonic March."

Clark Denies Reports He Eyes White House

St. Louis, July 18 (AP).—Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, halted his renomination campaign long enough tonight to declare "I'm running for Senator and nothing else," in answer to reports he had Presidential aspirations.

"There used to be a man in Lincoln County who said a bird in the hand is the noblest act of God," he added.

John B. Campbell, Ex-Captain, to Be Buried Here Today

Capt. John B. Campbell, 52, World War emergency officer who formerly made his home here, died Saturday at St. Louis, Mo., where he was general manager for the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co.

In poor health, his passing was hastened by grief over death Thursday at Cottage City, Md., of his brother, Leonard Campbell.

A native of Leonardtown, Md., Capt. Campbell entered the Government service in 1905. He was sent to Panama while the canal was being built and later traveled extensively.

In the World War he served for a time on the staff of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood and left the military service in 1920. He held a commission as a major in the Reserve Corps.

Capt. Campbell is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marie Simons Campbell; a daughter, Miss Marie S. Campbell, and a son, John B. Campbell, jr., all of St. Louis.

Three brothers and four sisters also survive. They are D. Howard Campbell, of Chicago, and Charles B. and Lawrence Campbell, of Washington; Mrs. S. R. Robertson, of Bethesda, Md., and Mrs. Allan Rinehart, Mrs. John Elleray and Mrs. Mary Jeper, all of this city.

Funeral services will be at 12:30 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel, with Chaplain Ora J. Cohee officiating. Interment with military honors will be in section 7 of Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Brown Dies; Funeral Thursday

Mrs. Adelaide Bury Brown, 81, former resident of the Capital and wife of the late James L. Brown, Washington yeast manufacturer, died yesterday at her home in Atlantic City, N. J., after a long illness.

She was the great niece of the late Rev. Edward Fairfax Berkley, of Washington, who founded St. Peter's Church in St. Louis. Her son was the late Albert Brown, an official of the Fleischmann Yeast Co. here.

For many years Mrs. Brown was identified with the management of several Atlantic City hotels.

She leaves two daughters, Mabel Fairfax Brown and Mrs. Eleanor Blanche Ochsenreiter.

Funeral services will be held in the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, at 1:30 p. m. Thursday. Burial will be private.

Funeral Is Today For Miss Wheatley

Funeral services for Sarah Wheatley, 61, for 15 years a member of the vestry of Grace Episcopal Church in Georgetown, will be held in the church at 11 a. m., today. She died Sunday in Georgetown Hospital after a three-day illness.

Miss Wheatley, daughter of the late James and Catherine Wheatley, devoted most of her life to the church. She was treasurer of the Sunday school and parish and president of the Rector's Aid Society.

The Rev. M. M. Perkins, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, will conduct the funeral. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

She had been living on Columbia pike in Arlington County.

Samuel Insull Funeral Delayed by Police Study

C. I. O. to Indorse Democratic Slate In Pennsylvania

Harrisburg, Pa., July 18 (AP).—The C. I. O. has decided to throw its full support to the Democratic ticket in the fall election test of New Deal strength in Pennsylvania, John Philips, president of the State Industrial Union Council, revealed today.

Philips said the labor organization which backed the unsuccessful gubernatorial candidacy of Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy in the primary would indorse the Earle-Jones ticket.

Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence said he was "delighted."

McNutt, 47 Today, Feted by Filipinos

Manila, July 18 (AP).—A crowd of Paul V. McNutt's friends, headed by Commonwealth President Manuel L. Quezon, and a native string band, gave the American high commissioner a rousing party tonight on the eve of his forty-seventh birthday anniversary.

Bearing torchlights, the crowd marched to McNutt's new home in the Pasay suburbs, where the commissioner and Mrs. McNutt were waiting with President Quezon. All three wore beautiful native costumes.

Rites Set Today For J. M. Buzzell, Long Store Worker

Funeral services for J. Monroe Buzzell, employe of Woodward & Lothrop for 50 years, will be held at his home, 25 Logan Circle, at 2 p. m. today. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Buzzell, who died Sunday, was 87. A native of Fletcher, Vt., he worked in Boston before coming here in 1882. At the time of his retirement a few years ago he was head buyer in the dress goods department.

An usher at Calvary Baptist Church, Mr. Buzzell was at one time assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. He is survived by his sister, Mrs. J. Allen Dexter, of Washington, and brother, the Rev. Henry A. Buzzell, of Cape May Courthouse, N. J.

Services will be conducted by the Rev. Frank Johnston, of Calvary Baptist Church, assisted by Dr. William A. Wilbur, of George Washington University, an old friend of Mr. Buzzell.

Pall-bearers will be W. W. Everett, first vice president of Woodward & Lothrop; George N. Everett, second vice president; W. H. Lehman, who succeeded Mr. Buzzell on his retirement; Harry E. Mockbee, Charles E. Davis and Frank M. Hall.

Lupe and 'Tarzan' Weighing Divorce

B. C. Roos, business manager for both the fiery Mexican actress and the former champion swimmer and film Tarzan, said today a property settlement had been drawn and awaits their signatures.

Both Lupe and Johnny said they agreed to a trial separation five months ago and were convinced it would be a good plan to make it permanent.

J. J. Maloney Heads N. Y. Secret Service

James J. Maloney, now supervising agent at Newark, N. J., will be supervising agent of the New York area, it was announced yesterday by Frank J. Wilson, chief of the United States secret service. Maloney will succeed William H. Houghton, on sick leave.

Fred W. Gruber was transferred from agent in charge at the Pittsburgh sub-district to acting supervising agent with district headquarters at Newark, and Frank L. Holliday was sent from agent in charge at Cincinnati to agent in charge of the Cleveland district, replacing John J. McGrath, who has been transferred to the post of acting agent in charge at New York City.

Duce and Hungary Premier Laud Axis

Rome, July 18 (AP).—Premier Mussolini and the Hungarian Premier, Bela Imredy, who is here for talks on questions growing out of the union of Austria with Germany, exalted the Rome-Berlin axis tonight in banquet toasts at the Palazzo Venezia.

Referring to "strong ties" with Italy and the "traditional and sincere friendship" with Germany, now Hungary's next-door neighbor, Imredy said "our friendly relations with the Rome-Berlin axis give us renewed hope that our efforts directed toward the realization of an enduring and just peace will bear their fruit."
